Changing Times and Philately

Anyone who has been active in this hobby for a long time realizes that trends and fashions are a part of philately. Two of the articles this issue deal with the changing practices of collectors. Charles Verge's column on Judging and Exhibiting describes one new development - that of the single stamp exhibit. Whether the One Stamp Exhibit becomes a trend is impossible to say at this time. It does offer the average collector, with a minimum of expenditure, the opportunity to assemble a serious philatelic study. Those of us involved in local clubs should endeavor to encourage our members in this direction. The single stamp approach is well suited to local shows, which normally use 6-page frames.

J.D. Williamson's article, discussing what he sees as declining interest in philately, is bound to be more controversial. Many collectors claim to have abandoned collecting the modern issues of Canada. On the other side of the ledger, Canada Post seems to have done well in encouraging new collectors to enter the hobby. Junior exhibiting, particularly at the national level, has grown over the past decade from virtually nothing to the highly successful CANADA '92 show in Montreal. The youth show in Toronto a decade ago was undoubtedly the catalyst for the growth in youth philately.

In spite of its success, CANADA '92 involved the active participation of only a tiny fraction of the junior collectors in the country. Some local clubs have had success in running junior nights and full junior programs. Others have not been able to retain juniors. Is stamp collecting only a passing fad for these juniors, or is it the beginning of a lifelong interest? Only time will tell.

When many of us began our collections as youngsters, a stamp from Europe, or Asia, or Africa seemed truly exotic, surrounded by an air of mystery and adventure. In the age of television and air travel, this is no longer the case. Juniors now approach the hobby with a much different perspective than three or four decades ago.

The situation with new adult collectors, or those returning to the hobby after many years, is somewhat different. Many of these collectors are drawn to philately by the colourful new issues put out by Canada Post and other administrations. Is the hobby, as a result, dividing along two lines: those interested in mint new issues, and those who pursue a wider range of collecting interests? Attendance at shows, both national and local, would seem to support this view. Many visitors (and patrons of dealers' bourses) never show their face at a meeting of a philatelic organization.

A number of local club executives are concerned that their average member seems to be getting older. It is in all our interests to prevent the hobby from splitting into a small group of narrow specialists on the one hand, and a larger, and perhaps younger, group of modern mint and topical collectors on the other. As times and collecting interests change, the leaders of our philatelic organizations must be prepared to accommodate new collectors and new interests in our philatelic organizations, both national and local.

In the last days of March Canada was hosting a most successful World Philatelic Youth Exhibition under the auspices of the F.I.P. in honour of Columbus’ voyage to the New World in 1492; the establishment of the City of Montreal in 1642 and the 1867 Canadian Confederation. This Exhibition brought to Montreal displays from 37 countries and visitors, both young and old, from many of them.

Canada was represented by 49 collections or slightly more than 10% of the total. This was a record showing for us and doubled our presence from CANADA ’82. We have also “brought home” our first Large Vermeil medal (with a special prize) won in an International Youth Exhibition. This honour belongs to Guillaume Vadeboncoeur who exhibited in the Traditional Section of Group “B” (16 year - 17 year olds) “The Small Queens of Canada”. Vadeboncoeur has also been awarded the Grand Prix National. Congratulations Guillaume and thank you for making us proud.

CANADA ’92, nearly 4 years in preparation, was magnificently well run by Denis Hamel, the Executive Director, and Alain Doucet, Director of Philatelic Sales and Development of Canada Post Corporation, who has taken personally a hand in preparations and implementation of the venue. To them and the many people involved in the management of CANADA ’92 our thanks and congratulations.

Gremlins have again struck at the CANADIAN PHILATELIST/LE PHILATELIST CANADIEN. The January/February issue was delayed beyond a reasonable time due to internal problems encountered by the printer. We hope, however, that under the Editorship of Steve Thorning all problems will be solved soon. Steve has added to his responsibilities the administration of the advertising in the magazine. Concentrating the control of the contents of the magazine should make his life easier. However, we still require a person to contact prospective advertisers. Volunteers may write directly to Steve Thorning or to the Society’s Office.

For those who have not yet noticed the new mailing address for the Royal’s Administrative Offices, it is:

P.O. Box 929, Station “Q”
Toronto, Ontario M4T 2P1

You may also FAX your letters to + 416-633-8393.

The ROYAL ’92 ROYALE Convention will take place at Europa Conference Centre in Edmonton, Alberta June 5 to 7, 1992. Most functions will take place at the official hotel, the FANTASYLAND HOTEL in Edmonton. I trust that many of our members will attend and savour true Western Canadian Hospitality and help the Edmonton Stamp Club celebrate the 80th Anniversary of their formation.

See you in Edmonton.

Royal '92 Royale

Trying to attend this year’s R.P.S.C. convention from June 5-7 in Edmonton. Having experienced the Edmonton Stamp Club’s hospitality a couple of years ago, I can assure prospective attendees that they will have an enjoyable time, some of Keith Spencer’s jokes notwithstanding.

In addition, there is the West Edmonton Mall to explore. Will one or more of our directors be taken for a submarine ride?

The Lure of Thematic Philately

Frank Alusio’s Themaphil article in our journal and the large number of thematic entries at CANADA 92, the international youth philatelic exhibition held in Montreal, prompted me to think about the increasing interest in this aspect of our hobby.

A large proportion of exhibits by youth at stamp exhibitions consist of thematic (or topical) presentations. Why? Are they easier to do? Do traditional philately and postal history seem to be too difficult for many young exhibitors?

There are very rigid and demanding rules for judging competitive thematic exhibits and as a result equally rigid rules for assembling them. Indeed, the dos and don’ts could be likened to those required for a PhD thesis. As the level of competition increases, it is not enough to have only a number of stamps related to the theme. Other philatelic elements — slogan and pictorial cancellations, meter slogans, stamp usages, booklets, proofs, and errors to name a few — should be interspersed with the basic thematic stamps themselves.

It could be easier — given among other things enough money — to assemble a first rate traditional display than to put together a comparable thematic exhibit. The theme itself must be researched to understand its scope; philatelic writings related to the theme must be unearthed — an often tedious chore given the wide variety of philatelic literature and the lack of comprehensive indexes to much of it; specialized catalogues and handbooks — be they worldwide or on the theme itself — should be consulted; and guidance should be sought — through reading about thematic exhibit presentation — as to how the material should be displayed to present the chosen theme in as clear a way as possible so that the viewers and the judges can best appreciate the final effort.

A well-constructed thematic display requires a great deal of patience and homework in order to flesh out its coverage. Themes in which people — be they youths or adults — have an interest certainly lend themselves to philatelic treatment. Space exploration and sports are two of many areas that often appeal to youth. Many adults might well consider forming collections relating to their vocations or to other interests they have.

Many of us were first attracted to stamp collecting because of the pictures on the stamps we saw. They interested us. They taught us things about our world. As we grew older, we may well have developed past the “pretty picture” phase of collecting and began to specialize in the stamps or the postal history of particular countries or of specific time periods. Some of us have thematic collections — be they sidelines or as just relief from working on other collections — which we thoroughly enjoy and which often are of more interest to viewers than are our highly specialized traditional collections.

Not all thematic collections need be subjected to the rigorous rules of competitive exhibiting. The enjoyment of collecting is in very large measure a personal thing. One's enthusiasm for what is collected can be heightened if the collection and its theme appeal to others and as a result perhaps make new converts to our hobby. Thematic collections play an important role in fostering interest in philately and in themselves can demand a high degree of philatelic competence.

r. Jephcott, membership #4499, was elected a Fellow of our Society in 1964.

Clare Jephcott was born in Toronto March 22, 1900 and died on April 2, 1968. He was educated in the Toronto school system and received his Ph.D from the University of Toronto in 1927. Dr. Jephcott was a recognized authority in chemistry and a Fellow of the Chemistry Institute of Canada and the Royal Chemical Society of Great Britain.

He was brought up in an atmosphere of stamps as his father, Alfred Jephcott, was one of Canada's leading collectors. Dr. Clare Jephcott specialized in the stamps of British North America as well as its postal history. He was considered one of Canada's greatest students of B.N.A. philately, and his Canadian plate block collection ranked as one of the finest in existence. Often he exhibited his Canadian plate blocks and Pence issues - especially the 7-1/2d - receiving Gold Medals and Grand Awards. As well, he frequently exhibited in Courts of Honour. As a philatelic judge he served on a number of international juries.

Dr. Jephcott wrote numerous articles for philatelic journals and papers, and was co-author of the Postal History of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, which won the top award for literature in 1965, in Vienna.

As an acknowledged philatelist he was not only elected a Fellow of our Society but also by the Royal Philatelic Society, London (England). He served a term as President of the British North America Philatelic Society. Dr. Jephcott was a member of the Toronto Stamp Collector's Club, Postal History Society, Essay-Proof Society and other philatelic societies in Canada and the United States.

Another of his hobbies was Bridge and he was considered an excellent master of the game.

Clare Jephcott's widow, Isobel, also a member of our Society, resides in Toronto.
The Reverend Gordon C. Simons of Thomasville, N.S., has kindly assembled the Precancel Count for 1991. It is by no means complete but only precancel collectors can remedy the situation by forwarding your totals. The Rev. Simons is willing to continue doing a precancel count listing as his part in promoting an interest in the collecting of Canadian precancels. Only those with collections of 500 or more different as reported to Rev. Simons are listed in the count. Another 34 Canada precancel collectors reported their counts to Rev. Simons but since they had less than 500 are not listed this time. The number of those reporting indicates that interest in Canadian precancels remains at a high level and that the number of collectors is growing.

Introduction

More fun than a barrel of monkeys? You bet! The Edmonton Stamp Club will be hosting the 64th annual convention of the RPSC on June 5, 6 and 7, 1992. We therefore extend a hearty invitation to all RPSC members, their families and their friends. The location of the show, West Edmonton Mall, will no doubt capture the interest of all involved.

Exhibition

This national and regional level show has room for about 280 16-page frames.

The Court of Honour will feature exhibits on the Alaska Highway in commemoration of the Alaska Highway’s 50th anniversary.

We are expecting to have some outstanding junior exhibits in the national level section as five exhibits will arrive from the Youth Court of Honour display at the World Columbian Stamp Expo '92 in Chicago.

Adult national level exhibits will cover a wide range of areas. These feature Canada (including airmails and postal history), Barbados, Gold Coast, New Zealand, Palestine and several interesting topical exhibits.

The jury panel will be chaired by Denis Hamel (Toronto). The other judges are Dick Malott (Ottawa), Georgia Moen (Spokane), Don Shorting (Victoria), Piet Steemberg (Garden City, B.C.) and Charles Verge (Ottawa). One or two apprentices will also be appointed.

In addition to the RPSC national and chapter level medals, there are a number of additional awards from the CAS, PHSC, AAPE and the JPA. There will also be Grand, Reserve Grand and Youth/Junior Grand Awards for the best exhibits in the show. The awards will be presented at the Awards Banquet on Saturday evening which will be followed by an exhibits walkaround. Tickets for the Award Banquet cost $25 each and should be reserved by June 1. The judging critique will be held Sunday morning.

Bourse

Representatives of Canada Post Corporation and the U.S. Postal Service will also be in attendance.

RPSC Activities

On Friday, the President’s Reception will take place following the closing of the exhibits and the bourse tables.

On Saturday, a meeting of the Chapter representatives, the Annual meeting, and a meeting of the RPSC Fellows are scheduled. A Director’s luncheon follows the Annual meeting.

Youth Booth

A special area will be set aside for the junior philatelists (age 16 and under) on Saturday and Sunday. Two-for-a-penny stamps and a stamp-guessing contest will be the major attractions at the booth. Demonstrations by junior collectors are also planned.

For those on less generous budgets, there are a number of places nearby along Stony Plain Road that can serve as a suitable resting place for your "stamped-out" feet.

Food
If a philatelic feast is not enough, the Mall features over 100 eating outlets which will fit into any budget.

There are also a few mega-stores within a short driving distance for those who like to rough it.

Finding Royal ’92 Royale
Finding Royal ’92 Royale should not be difficult.

In general the City of Edmonton is set up in a grid of numbered streets (running north-south) and numbered avenues (running east-west). As one proceeds north along a street, the avenue numbers progressively get higher. As one proceeds west along an avenue, the street numbers also progressively get higher.

The West Edmonton Mall is located in the west end of the city at 8770 170 Street.

The show will be situated in the mall's Europa Conference site which is located on the 3rd level of "Europa Blvd". By entering the Mall at Entrance #2 (north side - ground level), one also enters onto "Europa Blvd". A set of elevators just inside the entrance will then take you up to the show site.

Canadians and Armed Conflict
(Part 3: 1815-65)

by C.F. Black

In this part we look at events, and some of the Canadians involved in them, that have brought a resort to arms during the period between the War of 1812-4 and the Fenian Raids that began in 1866, provided a postal connection can be established.

THE WEST
In the early 1800s Thomas Douglas, the 5th Earl of Selkirk, whose portrait is on Canada 397, became concerned about evicted Scottish crofters and proposed their emigration to British North America. Thereupon he and his brother acquired a controlling interest in the Hudson’s Bay Company and obtained from it over 100,000 square miles in the Red River Valley, extending into what is now Minnesota. From 1812 to 1815 many crofters were established there, becoming the first large body of colonists in the northwest.

Selkirk retaliated in August by attacking and capturing the important NWC base at Fort William, pictured on Canada 984. A number of the NWC officers were arrested and sent to Canada for trial.

These events seriously affected the health of Douglas, who returned to Scotland in 1817 and died in 1820.

The two companies merged in 1821, thus putting an end to this sort of confrontation and ensuring the survival of the Red River Colony.

A Blackfoot Indian chief born in 1830 had three earlier Indian names before he was given his adult name, Isapo-muxica, which translates as “Crow Indian’s Big Foot,” later shortened by interpreters to Crowfoot, whose portrait is on Canada 1108.

Before he was age 20 he had established himself as a formidable warrior, having been in at least 19 battles and being wounded six times, one a wound that was to trouble him all his life.

In his later life he had fewer opportunities to show his capacity in warfare, but one such incident occurred in 1865, when he and his followers routed a band of Crees that had attacked a Blackfoot camp. His last warlike action, in 1873, was to lead a revenge party to take an eye for an eye against Crees who had killed his son.

The wooden paddle steamer seen on Canada 671 was the Beaver, built in 1835, that became the first steamship on the North Pacific coast. In 1862, when she was a trader for the Hudson’s Bay Company, she was turned over to the Royal Navy, and was assigned by the R.N. to charting the coast, becoming Her Majesty's Hired Survey Ship Beaver, or H.M.H.S. Beaver.

It must be confessed that it was her long and unusual name that really brought her into this account, for she never engaged in armed conflict; she did, nevertheless, contribute materially to the safety of Her Majesty's ships in the Royal Navy and the Canadian Navy in these waters.

The Canadas
In 1820-1 a military fortification on Cape Diamond at Quebec was constructed which made that city what Charles Dickens called "the Gibraltar of North America." This was, and is, the Quebec Citadel, which is shown prominently on Canada 174 and others, and on stamped post cards, the 1930 Webb 256 and the 1962 VC93; on the latter is an air view.

It was designed to protect the city from attack from the St. Lawrence River and as a last refuge for the garrison. It was on the site of much earlier works, some of which were incorporated. The Citadel was to become anachronistic with advances in military architecture and weapons, but fortunately has never been subject to assault.

A British garrison remained there until 1871, and it has since been the headquarters of an artillery school. During WW1 this fortification became the HQ of what was to become the Royal 22nd Regiment, and in WW2 it became famous as the site of two wartime conferences attended by Churchill and Roosevelt, Quadrant in August 1943 and Octagon in September 1944.

During the War of 1812-4 the vulnerability of the military line of communications along the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Kingston had been clearly demonstrated, and studies were made as to the feasibility of a canal linking the Ottawa River at Ottawa to Lake Ontario at Kingston. It was decided to proceed with the construction of a Rideau Canal, and a British officer, Lieutenant-Colonel John By, on Canada 820, was selected to be the superintending engineer. The 145-mile system of canals, locks and lakes was begun in 1826 and completed by 1831, at a cost of $4,000,000, making it probably the most expensive military work ever undertaken in North America. The Ottawa entrance to the Canal is shown on Canada 442.

In 1831 a paddle steamer, the Royal William, pictured on Canada 204, was built at Quebec. In 1833 she crossed the Atlantic, mostly under steam power, the first ship to have done so, and before long was sold to British interests; they, in turn, sold her to the Spanish Government in 1834.

She was converted by the Spaniards to a warship, becoming the Isabella Segunda, seen on Spain 1256. She was used to blockade the Northern Provinces during the First Carlist War, and became one of the first naval steamers to fire a shot in action. Her naval career ended in 1940, when she was hulked.

An artist who was closely associated with Canada was Cornelius Krieghoff, one of whose paintings forms the subject of Canada 610.
Kreighoff was born at Amsterdam, the Netherlands, in 1815 and came to New York in 1837, where he enlisted in the American army; after three years in uniform he was discharged, having earned the rank of corporal. He then re-enlisted, but soon became a deserter.

At about this time he married a French-Canadian girl, and in the early 1840s he came to Canada, first to Toronto, then, by 1847 he was in Longueuil. Thence to Montreal and later Quebec, where he associated with those in cultured circles, particularly military officers. It was there that he did most of the work that established his reputation.

By the mid-19th century there had been many years of strained, or even hostile, relations between France and Britain, as evidenced earlier in this account, but they had lately been improving, and these European neighbours had been further drawn together as allies in the Crimean War. As a token of this easing of tensions a ship of the French Navy paid a courtesy visit to our shores in 1855, the first since 1759, and the captain and crew received an enthusiastic welcome.

She was the corvette La Capricieuse, the centenary of whose visit was marked by France with a commemorative stamp, 773, which pictures a corvette of the 1850s identified as La Capriceuse. It is in fact another corvette of the same class, Galathee, as no representation of the former could be found in 1955.

Desbarats, whose civilian career was in the printing and publishing business. In this field he made such an impression on Sir John A. Macdonald, that he was appointed the first official printer of Canada, i.e., the first Queen's Printer.

His military career was in Ottawa, where he spent some years in the Ottawa Civil Service Rifle Regiment, attaining the rank of captain.

The Rebellion of 1837-8
Toward the end of 1837 armed rebellion broke out in both Upper and Lower Canada; the causes were fundamentally the same, such as the powers of the Crown-appointed Executive and Legislative Councils over the elected assemblies and the disproportionate influence of certain minorities.

Although joint action had been agreed on, the two Canadas fought basically separate conflicts. There is dispute over the impact of the rebellions, but they can be said to have led to the creation in 1841 of the united Province of Canada and the achievement within a few years of responsible government.

One of the leaders of the Rebellion in Lower Canada was Louis Joseph Papineau, whose portrait is on Canada 539. This was quite a change from the military activity of some of his early years, for during the War of 1812, as a young man in his mid-20s, he first joined the militia and then went on active service on the British side, being, for example, with Brock when he captured Detroit in August 1812, as mentioned in Part 2.

He had even before then entered politics, and was elected to the legislature of Lower Canada in 1808, and sat from then until 1837, serving as Speaker almost continuously from 1815 to 1837.

He was, however, becoming increasingly hostile to British rule, and declared himself a Republican, he and his followers proclaiming the independence of six counties. A warrant was issued for his arrest for, in effect, leading his party toward armed conflict against the Government. In order to escape arrest on the charge of high treason he fled to the United States just before the first major engagement, the battle of St. Denis on November 23, 1837. Under an amnesty he was able to return to Canada in 1845.

Among those who fought bravely as one of the rebels at St. Denis was Georges-Etienne Cartier, who was later, however, to become a loyal and eminent Canadian. He is among the Fathers of Confederation in the Harris painting reproduced on Canada 135 and 142, and in the photograph of the Fathers seen on 224, and as well has his portrait on 190.

A turbulent firebrand who had come to Canada from Scotland in 1820, at age 25, was William Lyon Mackenzie. Within a few years he had deeply offended the established authorities, but became a popular hero and was elected to the Assembly, from which he was several times expelled after re-election. In 1835 he became the first mayor of Toronto.

In 1837 he became the chief organizer of the forces of rebellion in Upper Canada, and it was thought by some at this time that his mind was unbalanced. In December 1837 his supporters marched down Yonge Street, with the expectation of seizing the capital, but after meeting a loyalist picket and exchanging musket shots they fled. Two days later there was a sharper engagement at a place called Gallows Hill; the rebels again turned and ran, with Mackenzie escaping to the United States. An international incident occurred when loyalists attacked and destroyed a rebel supply ship on the American side of the Niagara River. Mackenzie and his rebels shortly afterwards abandoned further hostile activity, his part in the Rebellion being effectively over.

Mackenzie does not himself appear on any Canadian stamp, but his initials do, for his grandson, William Lyon Mackenzie King, "W.L.M. King," our Prime Minister for over 21 years between 1921 and 1948, is the subject of Canada 304.

The Dominion of Canada's first Prime Minister, and a Father of Confederation, Sir John A. Macdonald, on Canada 135, 141 etc., can also be mentioned here. During the early stages of the Rebellion the young John A., a Loyalist who had been called to the bar in 1836, volunteered for active service. Although his military career involved him in little action he did participate in one confrontation in December 1837. About 1000 supporters of Mackenzie had on the 5th gathered at Montgomery's tavern in Toronto and in an armed affair with some loyalists there had been blood shed. On the 8th a force of over 1000 additional loyalists, including Private John A. Macdonald, marched to the tavern and were successful in dispersing the rebels who were still there.

In November 1838 large number of American supporters of the rebel's cause set out from Sackett's Harbour for an invasion of Canada. Under their leader, a Polish officer named Nils von Schultz, they landed a few miles down river from Prescott and established a base at Windmill Point. They hoped to capture Fort Wellington at Prescott, the fort pictured on Canada 996. The loyal settlers were quickly to muster in militia units at the fort and together with British regulars, including some from Fort Henry at Kingston (Canada 983), they proceeded to Windmill Point, which they surrounded.

There then came a bloody four-day battle with the loyal forces supported by British naval ships – the Battle of the Windmill; the rebels surrendered and were confined in Fort Henry. Von Schultz pleaded guilty and was hanged on the glacis of the Fort, but not before acknowledging the kind treatment he had received at the hands of the 83rd Regiment and the mayor of Kingston.

In April 1839, during a period of deep-seated feelings that immediately followed the Rebellion and continued for some time, an unseemly incident occurred in Montreal.

The focal point was the Chateau de Ramezay, seen on Canada 245, which was built in 1705 and was to be the home of a number of Governors of Montreal, Claude de Ramezay and successors. An unruly crowd outside the building got out of hand, the Riot Act was read and the street cleared by an armed force with fixed bayonets; a little later the Governor General, the Earl of Elgin, was pelted with stones as he left the Chateau.

The Claude de Ramezay after whom the Chateau was named came from France to New France in 1685 as a lieutenant in the colonial regular troops. He continued to be in or closely associated with military life during these days of French-English-Indian tensions and held other positions of responsibility as well as engaging in a number of business ventures.

He was appointed Governor of Montreal in 1704 and shortly afterwards built the Chateau as his residence. He remained as Governor until his death in 1724.

The Eureka Stockade

In the early days of gold mining at Ballarat in Victoria, Australia, the miners greatly resented having to pay 30 shillings a month for their licenses, and in November-December 1854 this flared up into Insurrection. Following a skirmish between the miners and some soldiers the former built a stockade on a claim called the Eureka and offered continuing defiance to the Victoria authorities.

On December 3rd the Government forces advanced on the stockade, over which was waving a locally-designed Eureka flag. The insurgents fired on the troops, who returned the fire, and 30 men were killed during the next 15 minutes. The rebels were led by a Peter Lalor, who later entered politics in Victoria, was elected to the Legislature, and for some time served as its Speaker.

A friend has drawn attention to a Canadian connection with this famous and tragic incident. There were two Canadians among the miners, or diggers, and both of them were killed. One was Charles Ross, who is credited with having designed the flag that flew and was waved over the Eureka stockade, and it is said that its design, featuring the Southern Cross, was adapted for inclusion in the designs of the flags of the State of Victoria and the Commonwealth of Australia. The flag of Victoria is not shown on any stamp, but on 172 and 197 the Southern Cross is featured.
Australia has pictured its flag on 671.

Some Fathers of Confederation
Mention has already been made of three Fathers who had engaged in military activity in their earlier years: Étienne-Paschal Taché (in Part 2), Georges-Étienne Cartier and John A. Macdonald. There are some others to be added to the list.

John Hamilton Gray, on Canada 135, 142 and 224, was the Premier of Prince Edward Island at the time of the Charlottetown Conference in September 1864, and was its chairman.

Canada 142

In his early twenties, about 1832, he joined the 7th Dragoon Guards of the British Army, and remained with them for 21 years, much of his service being in India and South Africa, and he spent two years in the forces during the time the Crimean War was being fought. He used to say that he had had a daughter born in each quarter of the globe, a fact that is said to have intrigued Queen Victoria.

On P.E.I. he was very active in the militia, and for five years was in command of the Volunteer Brigade of the Island. When it joined Confederation in 1873 Gray was appointed to be the Deputy Adjutant General, the senior officer, of the newly formed Military District 12 of the Dominion of Canada.

There was another John Hamilton Gray who was at Charlottetown and Quebec, a representative of New Brunswick. He is among those on Canada 142 and 224, but not on 135, on which the original Harris painting was cropped at the right, omitting seven Fathers, including him. After the law and politics his greatest interest was the militia. In 1840 he was appointed a captain in the N.B. Regiment of Yeomanry, by 1850 he was a major in the N.B. Rangers, and in 1854 he became a lieutenant-colonel.

Another P.E. Islander who attended the Quebec Conference, and who is seen in the Harris painting on Canada 135 and 142, was T. Heath Haviland, a lawyer and politician who became the Island's Lieutenant-Governor.

Haviland had been an active member of the Island volunteer militia for many years before becoming a lieutenant-colonel of the Queen's County Regiment in 1864, and later in the 1860s was promoted to colonel.

The Mayor of Saint John, N.B., in 1849-50, who was to become a Father of Confederation in 1868, when he attended the London Conference, had a bitter experience of violence during his mayoralty.

He was Robert William Wilmot, who may be identified as one of the eight delegates in London that are seen on Canada 448. On July 12th, 1849, he had to try to deal with an explosive situation that erupted in Saint John between the Orangemen and the Irish Roman Catholics.

The Orangemen were to celebrate the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne with a parade that was to pass through the predominantly Catholic district. Over one of the streets on the parade route the Irish erected an arch that was so low that the Orangemen would have had to dip their colours to pass underneath it.
Wilmot, with a magistrate and a constable, tried to remove it, but they were assaulted by the crowd and ordered out of the district. The Orangemen refused to change their route, and the military were called in, but before they could be positioned a riot broke out and several citizens were killed.

This one-year term as Mayor was enough for Wilmot. In 1850 he chose to limit himself to provincial politics.

Another person who is seen in the Robert Harris painting of the Fathers of Confederation on Canada 135 and 142 was Hewitt Bernard; he was not a Father, but was the secretary of all three Confederation Conferences.

When John A. Macdonald came to Charlottetown in 1864 he was accompanied by Bernard, the Deputy Judge Advocate General of Upper Canada. He was appointed secretary and performed his duties so satisfactorily that his services were retained throughout the process.

Back in 1855, before he had joined the civil service, Hewitt Bernard had enlisted in the Barrie Rifle company of the volunteer militia and remained in the militia for a number of years, eventually rising to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

There was yet another Father of Confederation, William McDougall, who will enter this account later because he in 1869 inadvertently became involved in an awkward incident during the unsettling days in the West.

The Crimean War, 1854-6
The war fought on the Crimean Peninsula from 1854 to 1856 was due to political and commercial rivalries between Russia and the allied forces of Britain, France and Turkey. The casualties were heavy, with the allies losing, from all causes, 252,000, and the Russians 256,000.

Canada played no national role in the War, but numbers of Canadians volunteered for service in the British forces. One of these volunteers was Lieutenant Alexander Roberts Dunn, born in Upper Canada, a six-feet-three lieutenant who was in the Light Brigade (in the 11th Regiment of Dragoons) during their charge at Balaklava on October 25, 1854. It was there that Dunn, one of the finest swordsmen and horsemen in the army, exhibited outstanding bravery, for which he was awarded the first Victoria Cross to be won by a Canadian. A Victoria Cross is shown on Great Britain 1331.

Great Britain 1331

It was during this war that Queen Victoria approved the suggestion that such an award be instituted, and she personally pinned a Victoria Cross on Dunn's tunic at the first investiture in June 1857.

Dunn died in Abyssinia in 1868 while serving in a British force sent to gain the release of British and other European captives.

In Halifax in 1787 there was born, of German Quaker and Irish parentage, a boy who was to be given a name that became known around the world. He was Samuel Cunard, who on his father's death in 1824 was left in charge of a family business that was becoming more and more involved in shipping.

During the War of 1812-4 one of their ships was captured by an American privateer, and fortunately recaptured.
Also during that war the young Samuel enlisted in the militia, in the 2nd Battalion of the Halifax Regiment, in which he rose to the rank of captain. His presence here, however, is due more to his enterprise and success in the field of shipping. Incidentally, the firm was part owner of the Royal William, mentioned earlier, seen on Canada 204 and Spain 1256.

By 1840 the Cunards had a contract to carry the mails between Britain and North America; their Britannia, seen on a non-Scott stamp of Fujeira, was the first to do so. The Line prospered, and stamps continue to provide us with attractive scenes showing representatives of their liners of various generations.

Cunard himself is not on any stamps, but his surname occasionally shows up in the names of his ships, e.g., the Cunard Countess is seen on Grenada 1017 and Virgin Islands 526. In 1989 Great Britain issued a British Ships souvenir pack in which two of the stamps show Cunarders, and the pack itself has become known as the Cunard Pack.

In 1859 Samuel Cunard was created a baronet, largely in recognition of his patriotism at the outbreak of the Crimean War, when he placed all of his ships at the service of the British Government for war use. Eleven of them were to carry troops, horses and supplies to the Crimea, and two more became successful hospital ships. Such Cunard contributions continued to benefit the British cause in later conflicts.

Indian Mutiny, 1857-8
In May 1857 Sepoys in the Bengal Army revolted against their British officers, an immediate cause being the required use of greased cartridges, which violated their religious principles. Other factors related to education and economic matters. Within a year the revolt was quelled.

Again, Canada was not nationally involved, but Canadians in the British forces were there, and two gained the Victoria Cross illustrated on Great Britain 1331.

Herbert Taylor Reade, from Upper Canada, was with the 61st Regiment of Foot when he was awarded a V.C. for great heroism at Delhi in September 1857 for leadership against a battery of cannon and his care for the wounded.

The other was a Nova Scotian, William Hall, who was serving in the Royal Navy, in H.M.S. Shannon, when he was attached to the Army. In September 1857 he was with a gun's crew firing at a large mosque, the key to Lucknow, when they were heavily attacked, and only he and one other were left. Nevertheless they breached the wall of the mosque, British troops broke in and captured Lucknow. Both got the award.

At that time a V.C. won by a member of the R.N. had a blue ribbon; the Army's were crimson. Only two naval V.C.s have been awarded to Canadians, this one and another during World War 1. One that is pictured on the Canadian Forces souvenir pack of 1985 has a blue ribbon, so there is an even chance that it is Hall's. All V.C.s awarded since 1920 have a crimson ribbon.

The American Civil War, 1861-5
This war between the northern and southern States had a number of causes, slavery and economic rivalry being the principal ones. It was won by the North, the Southerners surrendering in the spring of 1865.

Canadian opinion was generally anti-Northern, but Canadians enlisted on both sides. Tension along the international border led to a number of incidents, including at least one incursion onto Canadian soil, but war was avoided.

The war began when Confederate forces successfully attacked Fort Sumter (U.S. 1178) at Charleston, which on April 18, 1861, was evacuated by Union troops. The Confederates held it until 1865.
At least one Canadian was in the Confederate garrison, Robert Alder MacLeod, born in Prince Edward Island. In late 1863 his commanding officer gave MacLeod a small red part of the Confederate flag that had been flown there; it is attached to the note (illustrated here) which he sent shortly afterwards to his sister in New Brunswick.

The composer of the music for our national anthem, O Canada, Calixa Lavallee, seen at the left on Canada 858, spent two years, 1861-3, in the Northern Armies. The one word that summarizes the life of this composer is "music" and it was as a bandsman that he spent his time there. He had run away to the States from his home in Lower Canada in the late 1850s, and much of his life was spent there. His American experiences must have impressed him very favourably indeed, for after the war he was to advocate the U.S. annexation of Canada.

The most serious diplomatic crisis between Britain and the U.S. that occurred during the war was brought about when in November 1861 a ship of Northern Navy stopped the British merchantman Trent in neutral waters as she was taking two Confederate emissaries to London and Paris, and took them captive. However, the prisoners were returned, but there was no apology.

This violation of British neutrality had made war a possibility with Canada the likely battleground. This situation brings to our attention one John Abbott, on Canada 318, who was to be our Prime MacLeod’s letter to his sister in New Brunswick, with a piece of the flag from Fort Sumter.

Minister in 1891-2. He had been in the local militia since the 1830s and when this crisis arose he set about recruiting 300 men to form the Argenteuil Rangers, and he later became an officer and commander of the 11th Argenteuil Battalion of Militia.

Abbott was a lawyer, and his most celebrated case also concerned this war. In October 1864 Confederate agents had raided St. Albans, Vermont, from Canadian soil and were to be tried for extradition to the U.S. The Canadian and American Governments were both greatly annoyed when John Abbott was able by argument and persuasion to have the prisoners set free, thus bringing Canadian-American tensions again close to armed conflict.

In 1884, at Laird’s of Liverpool, there were built two mysterious vessels known only as Letter A and Letter B. The latter is the one seen on Canada 701, under her later name, Chicora.

The Letter B became a Confederate blockade-runner, by that time being known as the Let Her Be. At Charleston she was fully loaded with cotton and $5,000,000 in gold and successfully sped through Northern Navy patrol, although suffering some damage and experiencing casualties, making a fortune for her owners.

She was not long afterward sold to a firm in Pictou, N.S., and renamed the Chicora; under this name she will be heard from again.

Is Interest in Philately Declining? Some Thoughts

by J.D. Williamson

I am writing this in an attempt to pin down the reasons for a declining interest in philately. To do this I am giving my ideas on the problem in the hope of generating discussion on the problem and helping to find a solution to it. It may appear to some that I am objecting to the collecting of mint stamps. This is not the case. My feelings are that by over stressing mint collections the collecting of used stamps is being downgraded in a way which makes collecting of used stamps more difficult. This makes it more difficult for beginners to get and to keep up an interest in this hobby.

It appears to be the modern trend in philately to collect mint stamps. There are some advantages to this; the stamps are nice and clean, not marked up by a cancellation. There are also some disadvantages; you may start to wonder if you are collecting postage stamps or are you collecting stickers, produced specially to appeal to collectors. This feeling becomes more reinforced when the distribution of new stamps is restricted to special outlets. Besides, you might also think that a nicely cancelled stamp is more interesting than a stamp that anyone can buy.

The more I think of this, the more I begin to wonder, is it all a conspiracy, or at least a coincidental series of steps to make us shift our hobby to collecting only mint stamps. Canada Post, dealers in stamps, suppliers of stamping materials all have what they consider valid reasons to encourage mint collecting over collecting used stamps.

Canada Post has over the last couple of decades been issuing more and more commemoratives, which they frankly admit are to increase their revenues. They are at the same time marketing these commemorative issues in such a way that it is quite easy for collectors to get mint copies and at the same time (incidentally?) difficult for collectors to get nice used copies.

By far the greatest portion of commemorative stamps is sold through the philatelic department of Canada Post, at philatelic windows in post offices and through dealers. All of these methods are legitimate ways of marketing stamps. All of these get the stamps into the hands of collectors. And, we should remember that stamps in the hands of collectors are pure revenue, to Canada Post, with no further service required of Canada Post.

But it should be noticed by collectors, as I am sure it has been noticed by Canada Post, that by pushing special marketing procedures, these commemoratives do not, to a large extent, get into the hands of the general users. Those who rush into the post office to buy a few stamps are in the majority of cases given definitive stamps. Canada Post has a vested interest in collectors acquiring mint stamps. At the same time, they should also have an interest in stamp collecting in a broader sense.

The result of all this is that if you are a collector of used stamps you will find it very easy to get as many copies of definitive as you could desire. You will also find that it is very difficult to collect all of the commemoratives postally used, unless you buy the stamps and mail them to yourself. You then will risk having the stamps damaged in the mail.
Thus you must either have the stamps cancelled without putting them on letters (which I suppose is a form of cheating) or mail a large number of such stamps to yourself. Those who collect used stamps are well aware that you need several copies of used stamps to get a copy that you consider as suitable for your collection.

I should at this point mention cancellations. For many years hand cancellations were made with a hammer which made very nice and desirable round cancellations. Now hand cancellations are made with a rubber stamp which makes a messy cancellation with wide lines and print instead of the fine lines and print from the steel hammers. I am sure that the hammers cost more than the rubber stamps, but I am also sure that they last many years longer. Also, knowing how governments work, some of the old ones may still be around somewhere and could be brought back into use.

Another situation that makes it more difficult to get good used stamps for your collection is the increased use of postal meters by businesses. This makes good sense for them but it does cut down on the number of used stamps available. This is aggravated by the policy of Canada Post to discourage the sale of stamps at post office counters and put meter stickers on the mail handed in at the counter.

Dealers also have a vested interest in having us convert our collections to mint only collections. It is far easier for them to purchase a quantity of each commemorative which they can put in separate envelopes, files, books etc., than to get stamps on paper and soak them off and to have to handle individual stamps and sort them out and to separate them. Dealers also can increase their profits by handling special ways of mounting, saving or displaying mint stamps.

The publishers of catalogues, who are mostly the larger dealers, get into this conspiracy by keeping the prices in their catalogues higher for mint stamps than for used ones. This should be apparent to all as a violation of the principles of economics. Less handling should not result in the higher cost. Look at the prices in your catalogues. Look at your traders and the spaces where stamps are missing in your collection. It does not add up.

The results of this conspiracy, or coincidence of vested interests, is a decline in the number of collectors. As a general rule, new collectors, specially the younger collectors, start their collections with used stamps. If a new collector cannot easily get all the current stamps of the countries they are collecting, (and the problem is not restricted to Canada,) they will stop collecting. Children, do not generally have sufficient money to buy mint stamps in the quantity they would like. Used stamps are available in quantity but those available are mostly definitives. The RPSC, in pushing for more children to start collecting, should consider this issue.

The same problem occurs with older retired collectors who are living on a fixed income. They cannot afford to buy the many stamps that are now issued yearly by Canada Post: definitives, commemoratives, booklets, etc. etc. They too are dropping out of collecting. Those who do not drop out of collecting drop some part of their collections. Some stop collecting Canada, interest in collecting is not maintained by having more and more holes or spaces where stamps should be than having stamps in your collection.

I can see the changes in our stamp club. Membership has fallen off. New members are not joining. Club activities are not nearly as interesting. A few years ago members used to come with a large collection of traders and spend happy hours swapping stamps to improve our collections and to keep up the quality of our traders. Now there is very little such trading as it is so hard to get all the commemoratives that our accumulations of traders is meagre. We don’t have to come to a club to get mint stamps, so interest dies out. Interest in the Royal’s approval books is also falling off as they too show the same ability to supply mint and inability to provide a good selection of used stamps.

As someone who is active in our hobby, I am deadly afraid that Canada Post is killing to goose that laid the golden egg. They are aided by the dealers and the catalogue publishers, and I hate to say it, to some extent by advanced collectors who have progressed from collecting used stamps to collecting mint and who now are pushing all to collect mint. Certainly, mint stamps look nice, but so do carefully selected used stamps, and making used stamps hard to get and thus pushing us to collect only mint is not helping our hobby, it is killing it.

This process is, as I have said, not exclusive to Canada. It started 20 or 30 years ago in third world and Iron Curtain countries as a cash producing gimmick. It has been copied by all the major countries and has been for a time successful, but is now reaching the state of resulting in a falling off of collectors. I can remember, at the time when I first joined our stamp club, being told that I had to watch some stamps from some countries as they were so limited in distribution that they had been ‘black blotted’ as ‘labels’ that should not be collected or shown in exhibits. Maybe collectors then were more discriminating.

We as collectors should push for more and better collecting. There is nothing wrong with Canada Post and dealers optimizing their profits, but we in our collectors’ organizations should say what we want. The dealers can say and press for what they want through dealer organizations. In general we want the same things but the specifics are different. From the point of view of collectors, there should be some limits on the number of commemorative issues or at least on the ratio of commemorative to definitive stamps printed. We should also demand that commemorative stamps should be available generally, not only through special distribution, so they will have more general use as stamps. If we push for what we want to make our hobby better it will get better and the profits of Canada Post and the dealers will go up not down.

If Canadian collectors are the first to get back to a method of collecting that promotes a full range of collecting, their stamps will lead the world in value and interest. One of the ways of promoting collecting would be to cut down the number of commemorative stamps issued to a reasonable number. People tend to collect nice things until the number of nice things gets so large they have no further interest. Canada should limit commemoratives to subjects that are truly Canadian rather than copying nice commemoratives that other countries have issued.

A further way of generating interest, and incidently keeping up Canada Post’s revenues, would be to make subtle differences in the various definitive stamps, such as regular sheet, mini-sheet, and booklet versions of each of the definitive. At present there is no easy way, that I know of at least, of telling if a used definitive stamp comes from a particular printing, a particular booklet or from a mini-sheet. These are the kind of things that old time collectors spent hours studying and discussing, and which increased interest in collecting. I am sure that this kind of difference could easily be made, for instance in a method similar to hidden dates, at low cost and with great results.

Again, I must point out, I am writing this to promote discussion and increase interest in and about stamp collecting. I am not trying to tell anyone how to, or what to collect. That is up to the individual. What I want to see is more interest in philately, not less interest. It is in our interest to reverse the present trend and encourage more collecting. If we don’t make our likes and dislikes known, stated and restated, we will be told what we should like and dislike. All the best collectors I have known are very individualistic people who insist on doing things their way. Look around, our hobby is in danger!

5. METER FRANKINGS IN THEMATIC COLLECTIONS

There is a large number of thematic collectors who search for meter frankings to enrich their collections. These collectors are concerned about the choice of the material, its utilization, and its presentation. The following has been compiled to try to put together the related experience in thematic philately and meter frankings in order that it could be useful to all collectors who collect meter frankings for display in a thematic collection.

Which imprints to choose

In the choice of imprints it is better to give preference to those which allow the strengthening of a part of the theme, or explain a passage which stamps and other philatelic documents may not be able to do. For example, in a “Paper and Printing” collection, to develop adequately the chapter “The Paper Industry”, we could use some meter frankings. However, it is not advisable to include the imprints of all the paper mills that have a postage meter; it would be sufficient to place one of the major makers (Burgo) and one of the oldest and most famous companies: Fabriano. (Fig. 15).

Naturally, if instead of an imprint of the ’80s one could use an imprint of the ’30s, it would be much better. This would contribute, a small but significant, addition to “philatelic knowledge”.

Presentation of imprints in a thematic collection

One could say, in principle, that the meter frankings should follow the same criteria as we apply in presenting conventional cancels.

There are three solutions available:
- the entire document;
- the “windowed” document; and,
- the item on piece.

The entire document should be shown when the envelope is of reasonable size, with the imprint well centred and symmetrical. Generally the entire document is used when the franking predates 1960, or when the document also displays other signs of postal service which could improve the interest or when it is artistically convenient to fill out a certain space on the page.

The “window” solution should be used when dealing with large commercial envelopes (in general commercial envelopes cannot be accommodated on a page) and when the space that would be taken by the entire document could not be justified because the document itself lacked philatelic importance.

In the case of modern meter frankings or, if an item is impossible to obtain on full cover, the franking on “piece” is all that is required.

In a thematic collection one could mount pages with stamps, covers, “windowed” cancellations which are combined with meter frankings on cover, “windowed” or on a piece. There are no problems as far as aesthetics are concerned if the meter frankings are inserted in their proper place and if the messages they convey are intelligently displayed.

In mounting a thematic collection, it is advisable to frame the item with a dark line around it or mount it on a dark background and trim it so that a thin framing is formed.

The quality of a meter franking

The guidelines to apply when choosing the imprints are: centering, inking, uniformity and clarity of the imprint. It is obvious that in a thematic collection only superior quality items, i.e., perfect from all points of view, are considered for showing.
METER FRANKINGS

One of the major paper makers.

One of the oldest and famous paper makers.

The '000' meter imprints are not accepted in collections.
The centering is generally conditioned by the upper border and the right margin when showing the entire document. In the case of the "windowed" items, the imprint should be displayed with a uniform border with a minimum of 5 mm around it.

The inking of the imprint influences a great deal the aspect of the item. It should not be too thick (otherwise it would result in a smudged imprint) but not too light either, as in a large number of cases these are not legible. A normal inking gives a uniform imprint, clear in details and legible (at times, the irregularity caused by the thickness of the content in a letter creates defects in the uniformity of the imprint).

The specialists in this area know how many imprints they have to go through to find one which is perfect and satisfies the cited requirements. Like all other items in the exhibit one should select only those which respond to the most severe examination.

The "000" imprints
No one has come up with rules as to whether or not to accept the "000" imprints. However, most thematic collectors are in agreement that the imprints with the franking "000" should not be accepted in exhibits, in that these imprints have not served as franking and therefore have no postal significance.

Here a case emerges where one should consider the philatelic validity of the imprints. They should correspond to the current rates of the period they were issued in. Imprints with lower frankings have the same significance as documents cancelled to order. They can be acceptable within limits but certainly don't contribute towards the enhancement of a collection. The document which has the proper postal rate and usage has always an edge over the other.

How many imprints to include in a thematic collection?
It is practically impossible to give a general rule of how many imprints one should include. At one of the recent international thematic exhibitions, of the 120 collections examined, they varied from none to 47; only 14 collections did not contain any imprints. As a thematic collector and a specialist, I would advise however not to exaggerate.

At the same exhibition it was evident that many thematic collectors had obtained recent imprints through a series of auctions conducted by a well-known German auction house. In fact most of the imprints seen were all from the same source and, in large part, from Germany during the 1930 to 1950 period. We should not forget that imprints from as many as 150 countries do exist and that the choice of the few but significant imprints to include in a collection should not be limited to those of one's own country or, like the case cited above, to those of Germany. There are beautiful descriptive and illustrated imprints from many countries; certainly the research, not knowing where to start, is more difficult and tedious and the finds are sometimes limited and more usually by chance.

There are themes in which one could insert a large number of imprints: i.e., European themes, technical themes, etc. In a collection of "Automobiles", for example, the occasion to use imprints (to document the existence and evolution of certain types of automobiles or to show a car, or part of it, or an engine detail) is more frequent than in other collections. You might say the same for a collection of "History of Aviation", when the occasion is being offered in the various chapters: airlines, aircraft manufacturers, types of aircraft, new routes, and inaugural flights.

A collector should keep in mind that meter frankings are not there to help pad the collection (a thing that would be relatively easy when the material applied is of modern vintage) but are there to help develop a better exhibit by inserting a rare item.
What text should accompany the meter franking?
The thematic rules suggest that text should be limited to the minimum possible. It should serve only as a link and not repeat what the stamps and the philatelic material are trying to say. When in a thematic collection imprints are included, the same rule should be applied: reduce text to the essential, the same as with that of the remaining material. Since most of the imprints are self-explanatory, little text should be necessary. As for stamps, a case could be made that there exists the necessity to provide more of a descriptive text particularly when the wording on the stamp is often minute and at times unreadable.

There is no type of thematic collection that does not allow the utilization of one or more meter frankings. Many times their use allows the developing and documentation of passages not possible with traditional philatelic material. Other times their use allows the display of unique philatelic knowledge. Ultimately they offer the opportunity of presenting an exhibit with more varied philatelic elements.

6. POSTAL STATIONERY IN THEMATIC COLLECTIONS
A traditionally accepted definition of postal stationery can be stated as follows: postal stationery comprises postal matter which either bears an officially authorized pre-printed stamp or device or inscription that indicates that a specific face value of postal or related service has been prepaid.

In 1865 the Director General of the German Post, Heinrich von Stephan, proposed to the members of the Postal Conference at Karlsruhe the adoption of a franked card. The motion was declined and even ridiculed. Five years later another analogous proposal was presented by the Austrian Emmanuel Hermann. This time the idea was unanimously accepted and the Austrian Post issued the first postal card on 1 October 1889, followed a few months later, 6 June 1870, by Germany.

So von Stephan had the satisfaction to see the sale in Berlin, on the first day of issue, of 4,600 pieces of his "Postblatt".

The different categories of postal stationery are usually self-explanatory. However, one must use care in choosing the proper terminology for "cards". Those issued by postal administrations are termed "Postal Cards". These may be with or without pictures on either or both sides and with an indiction of franking. Maximum cards are not included in this discussion as they form an entirely different entity (known as Maximaphilately) and because many maximum cards are not issued by postal administrations.

An example of a postal card is the Italian Marconi issue of 12 December 1981 to celebrate the first trans-Atlantic radio signal between Canada and England. This has an indicium of L250 in the upper right corner. This issue would fit equally well in collections as disparate as Science, Nobel Prize Winners, or Telecommunications.

Post cards are commercially printed cards, usually with pictures on one or both sides, without indicia or franking indication. An example of a picture post card is the Canadian CAPEX 87 issue reproducing the stamp showing Toronto’s first post office opened in 1834. The card has no franking on the front nor on the reverse, but is catalogued as Post Office Thematic Post Card No. 13 (Fig. 16).

As a general rule post cards, particularly picture post cards, are a good source of thematic illustrations for a collection, but these same post cards are unacceptable in competitive exhibits. They may be used in exhibits when their use is to illustrate postal markings, included stamps, or rates that may be relative to the theme. If a post card must be used in a competitive exhibit, the safest place to show it is on the title page.
An example of a Postal Card with imprinted indicium.

A commercially printed Post Card without imprinted indicium is not accepted in a collection.
Displaying postal stationery
Perhaps the only problem in displaying postal stationery is the large size of the individual items coupled with the not infrequent need to display both sides of the item. These problems are handled basically the same way one solves similar problems with covers. Both sides may be shown by using two copies of the item or by using a full-size or reduced photocopy or photograph of the less important side. Using “windows” to show the important features of the stationery while covering up unnecessary portions is acceptable as is, in some cases, overlapping similar items emphasizing desired portions while covering unwanted areas. (This is not recommended for competitive exhibits).

Cut squares are not considered appropriate for competitive exhibits and should be avoided unless no other material is available. Finally, whether the pages are for exhibits or for your own enjoyment, be flexible and varied in your presentation. Avoid long series of pages with exactly the same format.

Postal stationery can be grouped into the following classes:

Post Office issues: Stamped stationery prepared to the specification of and issued by postal administrations for public use. It is important to distinguish unofficial private modifications of normal Post Office issues made for philatelic purposes which are often termed “Repiquages”.

Official Service issues: Stamped stationery produced for the use of Government Departments only. Imprinted stamps may be similar to those found on Post Office issues or of a special design. Alternatively, Post Office issues may be adopted for Official Service by overprinting.

Armed Forces issues: Stamped stationery produced for the use of the armed forces. Imprinted stamps may be similar to those found on Post Office issues or of special design.

Stamped to Order (Private) issues: Stamped stationery bearing Post Office stamps, applied with postal administration approval and within specified regulations to the order of private individuals or organizations. Imprinted stamps may cover a wider range of denominations, and hence designs, to those found on Post Office issues. It is important to distinguish within the stamped to order class between those items that were produced for genuine postal usage and those produced for philatelic purposes.

Local Post issues: Stamped stationery produced by private postal agencies with varying degrees of Postal Administration recognition or support.

7. EXHIBITING WITH “WINDOWS”
In the latter part of the 1960s, some exhibitors created a new technique for displaying cancellations on the pages of a thematic collection. Judges, other experts, and collectors propagated this technique in several countries. Rapidly introduced in a number of exhibits competing in FIP international exhibitions, the idea has become widely used.

The background for the “windows” is very simple. Cancellations and postmarks are normally on a cover or a card which, when mounted, takes about half a page, whereas the thematic content is often just a minor portion of it. To overcome this loss of space, the cover or card is mounted on the back of the page and the postmarks displayed through a “window” cut in the page.

As a result, a greater number of philatelic items can be presented and the general appearance of the page is more attractive. This technique may be applied whenever the part of the cover or the card to be hidden is of no philatelic interest. It may be blank, show a second cancellation identical to that displayed or even have a privately originated cachet (these cachets are not considered in the thematic development of a collection). A
Here the cut is limited to two sides. The cover has been inserted through them. The photo corners on the upper right corner of the envelope is on the front side of the page.

In this case the 'window' has been cut out. The cover and the photo corners are all on the back of the page.

"window" could satisfy the need to present only the most interesting part of a cover, namely the stamps and the postmarks.

This technique represents a trade-off between two aspects:
- it allows one to display more items on the same page and to obtain a more balanced presentation. More items often mean a better opportunity to show the personal research carried out by the collector; and,
- it indicates that the items behind the "window" are of lower interest since the exhibitor is partially hiding them. No collector will do that in case of documents that are of significant interest from a philatelic exhibiting standpoint.

Therefore, it is advisable to limit this technique to the most common items, for instance those which have been cancelled but have not seen postal service.

Postal stationery items, like postal cards, letters, etc. may sometimes be shown through a "window", but only when one shows only the cancellations. When they are being used in the thematic development as postal stationery items, it is recommended that one show the full item.

A "window" may be cut into two ways:
- by making a square or rectangle hole in the page. The item is then mounted on the back with self-adhesive corners, such as those used for photographs; or,
- by cutting two lines corresponding to two sides of the square or rectangle. The item is inserted through this cut and the upper corner is fastened with a self-adhesive corner, on the front side. The other self-adhesive corners are on the back side of the page (Fig. 17).

The size of the "window" should not be too big, but large enough to show the stamp(s) and the cancellation completely. The effect of the "windows" is pleasant only if the execution is very neat; many stationery shops sell a variety of cutters that make it easy to do this work correctly.

There are no rules underlying this technique; it is just a practical solution. The desire to show as much material as possible and the increasing difficulties in getting a sufficient number of display frames are the basis for windowing. Its use should be made with full respect of the fundamentals of philately.

Welcome to Edmonton, a city where pyramids are dotting the landscape and where submarines cruise within the confines of a shopping mall. The City of Edmonton will be the host site for the 64th annual convention of the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada. Royal '92 Royale will be held on June 5, 6 and 7, 1992 in the world famous West Edmonton Mall and it is bound to be an event to remember.

Edmonton, A Brief History

Edmonton's beginnings (from a European viewpoint) started with the arrival of fur traders in the late 1700s. Both the North West Company and the Hudson's Bay Company established forts in the area. The Hudson's Bay Company post was named Edmonton House because Edmonton, England was the birthplace of Sir James Winter-Lake who was the deputy-governor of the Hudson's Bay Company.

In the 1890's, the Klondike gold rush brought hundreds through the area. In 1904, Edmonton became a city and the following year it became the provincial capital.

In 1947, oil was discovered in nearby Leduc and Edmonton became known as the "Oil Capital of Canada". In more recent years, the success of the Edmonton Oilers and the Edmonton Eskimos prompted the new tag of "The City of Champions". Edmonton is also known as the "Festival City" in honour of the number and variety of its summer festivals.

The Mall

The West Edmonton Mall has become one of Edmonton's key tourist attractions and for good reason. The Mall features the world's largest indoor amusement park, the world's largest indoor waterpark, a full size ice rink, submarine rides and even dolphin shows. The whole family will be thoroughly amazed by the scale of this facility.

For History Buffs

Fort Edmonton Park is one of the more popular places for visitors to the city. The Park highlights the development of Edmonton from the early 1800s to the 1920s. People in period costume bring the history to life by serving as historical interpreters.

Rutherford House offers a glimpse of life in Edmonton in 1915. Alberta's first premier, Alexander Cameron Rutherford, lived in this Edwardian mansion. Again, costumed interpreters add a special touch as they recreate normal household activities.

Other historical structures of note include the Alberta Legislature Building which was completed in 1912 and the Alberta Government House which served as the official residence for Alberta's Lieutenant-Governors until 1937.

Museum lovers will thrive on the variety of museums the city has to offer. The Provincial Museum of Alberta which is located right next to Alberta Government House provides an insight into the natural and human history of the province. The Fossil Gallery always seems to intrigue young and old alike.

The Strathcona Model and Toy Museum features a unique display of over two hundred models and toys made entirely of paper. Paper specialists take note!

Those with warrants outstanding will want to avoid the Edmonton Police Museum. It is located in the headquarters of the Edmonton Police Department and it depicts the history of law enforcement in Alberta.

Members of the Canadian Aerophilatelic Society will be pleased to learn of Canada’s Aviaton Hall of Fame. This facility is located within the Edmonton Convention Centre and the exhibits honour more than 100 people who contributed to the history of Canadian aviation. The audiovisual resource centre has more than 100 historical aviation video tapes.

Vista 33 provides a high level view of the city from the 33rd floor of the Alberta Telephone Tower. Once you are tired of the view you can look at the adjoining Alberta Government Telephones (AGT) Museum. It features the development of AGT and the world of telecommunications.

For Nature Lovers
The North Saskatchewan River valley is one of Edmonton’s greatest assets. It is the longest and largest stretch of urban parkland in the country. A peaceful stroll along the river valley will do wonders for those who are determined to do a whirlwind tour of the city.

Plant lovers must visit the Muttart Conservatory which is located in the river valley. Housed within the Conservatory’s four glass pyramid-shaped pavilions are specimens from all over the world. Three pavilions are dedicated to showing the plants from arid, temperate and tropical climatic zones. The fourth pavilion showcases brilliant floral displays that change with the season.

A nice facility for the family is the John Janzen Nature Centre. It provides programs, exhibits and information about nature in Edmonton.

The Valley Zoo is another family oriented attraction. Animals from every continent are in the collection. Children will love the hands-on experience at the Petting Zoo.

For Enquiring Minds
The Edmonton Art Gallery is located in downtown core and exhibits some of the best art from Canada and from around the world.

The Edmonton Space and Science Centre is a real treasure. It features the requisite space exhibits, a planetarium and public observatory as well as an IMAX theatre and laser light music concerts.

During the spring and summer, the city really comes alive with festival after festival. It is a real joy to be here for the Teen Festival of the Arts, the Edmonton International Children’s Festival, the Jazz City International Festival, The Works: A Visual Arts Celebration, Summerfest: Edmonton Street Performers Festival, Edmonton’s Klondike Days, the Edmonton Heritage Festival, the Edmonton Folk Music Festival and the Fringe Theatre Festival.

Edmonton is also blessed with more professional theatre companies per capita than any other Canadian city.

Conclusion
The show committee of Royal ’92 Royale and the Edmonton Stamp Club sincerely hope that your visit to Edmonton will be both fun and memorable.

Canadian Underpaid Overseas Letter Mail 1897-1914

by George B. Arfken

In an earlier article, "Canada's Small Queen Era: Underpaid Overseas Letter Mail" discussed underpaid overseas letter mail for the years 1870-1897. The present article may be considered a sequel, extending the discussion through the King Edward VII issue and up to the start of World War 1. During this period 1897-1914, Imperial Penny Postage was introduced and there were two Universal Postal Union treaties. Because Imperial Penny Postage and the two UPU treaties changed postal rates, postal markings and underpayment penalties, dates become important. The dates when the new postal rates and regulations became effective and the major changes in rates and regulations are listed in Table 1.

Imperial Penny Postage. At the 1897 UPU Congress in Washington, there had been discussions and proposals for an international rate less than the current 5¢ per 1/2 oz. No action was taken. In December 1897, Canadian Postmaster General Mulock attempted to establish a 3¢ per 1/2 oz. rate for Canadian letters to any point in the British Empire. The British Post Office authorities refused to accept Mr. Mulock's unilateral action and forced him to rescind his announcement. In July 1898, a conference in London persuaded British authorities to agree to the voluntary adoption of a 2¢ per 1/2 oz. rate. Acceptance of the new rate would be optional for each part of the British Empire. Canada agreed to the new rate and issued the 2¢ multicolored map stamp for this occasion. The new rate, 2¢ Imperial Penny Postage, became effective December 25, 1898.

This new 2¢ Imperial Penny Postage opened up many opportunities for misunderstanding postal rates and led to additional underpaid overseas covers. Figure 1 provides an example. The postage on this cover to New South Wales was paid with a 2¢ Numeral. This was Imperial Penny Postage to a part of the British Empire. Unfortunately, in August 1900, New South Wales had not accepted 2¢ Imperial Penny Postage. The correct rate was the 5¢ UPU rate and the cover was 3¢ underpaid. The Canadian Post Office stamped the cover with an encircled T/15. T was the international UPU symbol to indicate underpayment and 15 was the 3¢ deficiency expressed in centimes. (1¢ = 5 centimes.) The UPU regulation, Postal rate reduced to 2¢ per 1/2 oz. Not all members of the British Empire had accepted the new 2¢ rate at this time.

Simple deficiency charged on letters underpaid because of redirection.

(1) Underpaid covers to be marked with amount to be collected. (2) Basis weight raised from 1/2 oz. to 1 oz. (3) Rate for 2nd and successive ounces reduced to 3¢ per oz.
in effect since 1879, was to double the deficiency. In New South Wales, this led to a written 3d and the application of a 3d postage due stamp.

Two points: (1) The deficiency was to be expressed in centimes and stamped on the cover. (2) The amount to be collected at destination was double the deficiency.

The 1897 UPU Treaty of Washington
The delegates at the Congress of Washington were generally agreed that underpayment should be penalized – to encourage the use of postage stamps and to encourage prepayment of the correct amount. There was one exceptional situation. A letter might be properly paid to a domestic destination and then become underpaid because it was redirected out of the country and subject to the higher UPU rate. Application of the mandatory doubling penalty did not seem appropriate in this situation. The delegates agreed that when a letter became underpaid because of redirection only the amount underpaid would be charged.

Canadian domestic letters redirected overseas were rare. The introduction of Imperial Penny Postage made a drastic change. It was not nearly so unlikely that a letter properly paid the 2¢ Imperial Penny Postage rate to the U.K. would be redirected to a neighbouring European country and be underpaid relative to the 5¢ UPU rate. Such covers are scarce but by no means rare. Figure 2 illustrates this situation. Posted in London, Ont., June 14, 1905 and addressed to London, England, this cover was properly paid the 2-fold Imperial Penny Postage with a pair of 2¢ Edwards. In England, the cover was redirected to France. This meant a 2-fold 5¢ UPU rate, underpaid 6¢. The British Post Office stamped the cover with a T to indicate underpayment and wrote on a 2 show that two rates were required. Because the 6¢ deficiency was the result of redirection, the French Post Office rated the letter at 6¢ or 30 centimes due, simple deficiency rather than double deficiency. A French 30 ctm postage due stamp was affixed.
Figure 2: Two 2¢ Edwards properly paid the 2-fold Imperial Penny Postage to England. When redirected to France, the cover was short 6¢ of the 2-fold 5¢ UPU rate of payment. Charged simple deficiency because of redirection: 30 centimes. Receipted with a French 30 ctm postage due stamp.

One further note on the 1897 Congress of Washington. The Regulations of Detail and Order that accompanied the Treaty included the following provision:

Article VI – Postage Stamps

1. The postage stamps represented the normal Union rates or their equivalents in the money of each country as printed as far as possible in the following colors:

   The 25 centime postage stamps in dark blue; (UPU letter) the 10 centime postage stamps in red; (UPU post card, domestic letter) the 5 centime postage stamps in green (UPU printed matter, domestic post card)

This is why the colours of Canadian stamps were fixed at 1¢ domestic post card rate – green, 2¢ or 3¢ domestic letter rate – red and 5¢ UPU letter rate – blue.

The 1906 UPU Treaty of Rome. Three changes were made regarding underpaid overseas mail. First, the delegates decided that underpaid covers should be marked with the amount to be collected rather than with the deficiency as had been the practice. This new marking is shown in Figure 3. This cover went from St. John West, N.B., May 29, 1908, to Belgium. Whether paid the 2¢ Imperial Penny Postage or the 2¢ domestic rate, the cover was 3¢ short. The Canadian Post Office doubled the 3¢ deficiency to 6¢ or 30 centimes and stamped the cover with an encircled T/30. The Belgian Post Office applied 10 ctm and 20 ctm postage due stamps. Figure 3 with its T/30 should be compared to Figure 1 with its T/15. Each cover was underpaid the same 3¢ but the marking regulation changed.

The cover of Figure 3 is stamped RETOUR A L’ENVOYER, return to sender, and there is an Ottawa Dead Letter Office backstamp. So who paid the 30 centimes? The answer for this cover is – nobody paid. The Belgian dues were affixed before delivery as a Figure 3. May 29, 1908. Imperial Penny Postage was paid to Belgium with a 2¢ Edward. The cover was 3¢ short of the required 5¢ UPU payment and was stamped 7/30 for the 30 centimes to be collected. Belgian dues of 10 ctm and 20 ctm affixed. Delivery failed and the cover was returned to the Ottawa DLO.

 Matter of convenience. They served as an official notice of the amount due and would have been a receipt if delivery had been completed (with the addressee paying). Delivery was not completed and the Belgian postmaster had some paper work to do to explain why he or she didn’t have 30 centimes in cash in place of the 10 and 20 ctm postage due stamps that had been affixed to the cover.

The second change coming from the Congress of Rome was a change in the basic mass/weight. The 15 gram standard was raised to 20 grams. The old 15 grams was closely equivalent to 1/2 oz. and so 1/2 oz. was accepted as the basic weight for countries using ounces. The Congress of Rome accepted one full ounce as the new basic weight, equivalent to 20 grams. Mathematically this was ludicrous. The increase in grams was 33%. The increase in ounces was 100%. But ludicrous or not, this was the accepted equivalence.

Figure 4. January 2, 1912. The 5¢ UPU rate to Turkey (for up to 1 oz.) was paid with a 5¢ Edward. In England, the cover was found to be overweight. The cover was marked 2 for two rates and stamped 3d, doubling the 3¢ that should have been paid for the second ounce. (Courtesy of Allan L. Steinhart.)

The third change was a reduction of the postal charge on the second and successive ounces from 5c per oz. to 3c per oz. The argument was that the cost of sorting and delivering a 2 oz. letter was little more than the cost of sorting and delivering a 1 oz. letter.

This reduction in the postal charge on the second ounce made a difference in the rating of overweight letters. Figure 4 illustrates the new rating. This cover, addressed to Turkey, was mailed in Toronto on January 2, 1912. The 5c UPU rate was paid with a 5c Edward. Accepted by the Canadian Post Office as a single rate letter (not over 1 oz.), the cover was declared overweight by the British Post Office, short paid 3c for the second ounce. The cover was stamped 3d for the amount to be collected. The manuscript 2 indicated two rates.

Perhaps the reader has questions about this cover. It’s quiet different from the previous three covers. Overweight but there is no UPU T. The amount to be collected is in pence, not in UPU centimes. Turkey had issued postage due stamps for almost half a century but there are no Turkish postage due stamps and no Turkish postmarks. The resolution of these anomalies comes with a backstamp BRITISH POST OFFICE CONSTANTINOPLE. British postal authorities charged the UPU rate, 2-1/2d for the first ounce, 1-1/2d for the second ounce, and applied the UPU doubling penalty but otherwise treated this cover as British mail (not UPU mail) going from London to Constantinople.

This writer gratefully acknowledges the help of Thomas A. Hillman in providing material from the National Archives, of William S. Pawluk for useful discussions and of Allan L. Steinhart for permitting the inclusion of his due 3d cover to Turkey.

New from Canada Post - Nouveautés de Postes Canada

Queen Elizabeth, Canadian Flag and Fruit Trees Featured on New Stamps

OTTAWA – Canada Post Corporation today announced details of the new definitive stamps and postage products being issued to reflect new postage prices for 1992.

Several versions of the familiar Canadian flag design appear on the new 42-cent stamps, which went on sale December 27. Sheets of 100 stamps as well as packs of 10, 25, and 50 show the flag against a background of rolling hills. The 100-stamp coil carries a design of the flag in one-colour engraving.

The new Quick Sticks self-adhesive stamps, the fourth issue in the series, show the flag flying in front of a mountain. The stamps went on sale January 28 in packs of 12 for $5.25.

All flag stamp designs were created by Gottschalk and Ash International of Toronto.

The familiar portrait of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II by Yousuf Karsh will again appear on a definitive stamp, printed this year as a 42-cent denomination with a purple background. The stamp went on sale December 27 and is available in packs of 10 and in sheets of 100. The stamp was designed by Tom Yakobina of Montréal and Chris Candlish of Toronto.

Three new medium-value definitives are being issued December 27 to replace the three-year definitive series on mammals. The new series depicts fruit trees grown in Canada.

A McIntosh Apple tree appears on a 48-cent stamp, the rate for mail to the United States. A Black Walnut tree appears on a 65-cent stamp, the rate for Le drapeau du Canada a été retenu encore pour illustrer de nombreux nouveaux timbres de 0,42 $. Des feuilles de cent timbres ainsi que des carnets de dix, de vingt-cinq et de cinquante présenteront le symbole contre un chaînon de collines. Une version monochrome du drapeau, gravée en taille-douce, figurera sur les timbres en rouleaux de cent. Tous seront émis le 27 décembre.

On doit à la maison torontoise de Gottschalk + Ash International tous les timbres consacrés au drapeau du Canada.

Le portrait bien connu de Sa Majesté la reine Élisabeth II qu’a réalisé Yousuf Karsh sera de nouveau reproduit cette année sur un timbre courant de 0,4 $. Tiré sur fond pourpre, il sera offert en carnets de dix et en feuilles de cent. Le graphiste montréalais Tom Yakobina et le Torontois Chris Candlish ont uni leurs talents pour réaliser ce timbre, qui l’on pourra se procurer à compter du 27 décembre également.

Trois nouveaux timbres courants de valeur moyenne seront émis le 27

Rivers Stamp Series to Continue with look at Water Ways of Industry and Commerce

OTTAWA – Canada’s River Heritage, a continuing series of commemorative postage stamps depicting important Canadian rivers, will continue next month with the issue of a booklet of ten 42-cent stamps, Canada Post Corporation announced today. The stamps are being issued on April 22, which has been designated Earth Day.

The stamps focus on five “Waterways of Development”, each featuring a typical portion of the river and an important element of its commercial or industrial use.

La Série sur les Fleuves et Rivières du Patrimoine met à l’honneur les axes de Développement de L’Industrie et du Commerce.

OTTAWA – La série «Fleuves et rivières du patrimoine», qui présente des cours d’eau importants du Canada, se poursuit avec l’émission le mois prochain d’un autre carnet de timbres commémoratifs. C’est ce qu’a annoncé aujourd’hui la Société canadienne des postes. Le
The Margaree River, which flows through Cape Breton, supports a commercial fishery and is important to the local farming and tourism industry. The River is world-renowned among sport fishermen for its Atlantic salmon, which is shown in the foreground of the stamp.

The South Saskatchewan River forms a large part of one of Canada's most extensive river systems. A mallard duck is shown in the foreground, representing the wildlife supported by Lake Diefenbaker that was created by the river's Gardiner Dam to ensure adequate water supplies in the area.

The Ottawa River is one of Canada's most historically significant rivers, having served as the early fur-trading link between Montreal and the Canadian interior. Its importance as a key logging route is represented in the foreground of the stamp with a drawing of a steam tugboat pulling a log boom.

carnet de dix timbres de 0,42 $ sera mis en circulation le 22 avril, Jour de la Terre.

Le motif de ces vignettes, qui présentent cinq axes de développement de l'industrie et du commerce, est formé d’un paysage typique de la rivière et d’un élément évoquant sa contribution à l’industrie et au commerce.

La rivière Margaree, qui coule dans le Cap-Breton, profite à une pêcherie ainsi qu’à des entreprises agricoles et touristiques. Prisée par les amateurs de pêche du monde entier pour sa population de saumons de l’Atlantique, la rivière est présentée avec un spécimen de cette espèce.

La rivière Saskatchewan Sud forme une grande partie d’un des plus grands réseaux hydrographiques du Canada. Un malard figure au premier plan du motif pour représenter la faune dont la survie est assurée par le lac Diefenbaker, créé au moyen du barrage Gardiner. Érigé sur le cours de la Saskatchewan Sud, ce barrage assure l’approvisionnement en eau dans la région.

La rivière des Outaouais a joué un rôle primordial dans l’histoire du Canada. Reliant Montréal au centre du pays, elle a d’abord servi à la pelleterie puis à la Several electricity towers are shown in the foreground of the stamp featuring the Niagara River. The river and its famous waterfall generate electric power on a world scale, serving as the natural power source for much of central Canada and a large portion of the northeastern United States.

The Elliot or West River of Prince Edward Island supports a number of water-based industries, including one surrounding the renowned Malpeque oyster, which is shown in the foreground of the stamp. The Elliot River flows into Charlottetown Harbour, near Malpeque Bay where the oysters are farmed.

The detailed pencil drawings are by Jan Waddell and the overall design by Malcolm Waddell, both of Toronto.

Official first day covers will show a Niagara Falls cancellation and will feature a cachet showing the Horseshoe Falls.

drave. Son rôle de route principale pour le transport du bois flotté est illustré sur la vignette au moyen d'un remorqueur à vapeur tirant du bois.

Au premier plan du timbre consacré à la rivière Niagra figurent plusieurs pylônes qui rappellent l'énergie chutes, principales sources d'énergie naturelle pour la majeure partie des provinces centrales du Canada et une bonne partie du nord-est des États-Unis.

Située à l'Île-du-Prince-Édouard, la rivière de l'Ouest – aussi appelée rivière Elliot – contribue au maintien de diverses industries, notamment à l'élevage des huitres. La rivière Elliot se jette dans le port de Charlottetown, près de la baie Malpeque; c'est là qu'on cultive la variété d'huitres du même nom, illustrée sur la vignette.

Jan Waddell a signé les dessins au crayon, Malcolm Waddell, le motif. Tous deux sont de Toronto.

The Judging and Exhibiting Column – La rubrique du juge et de l’exposant
by/par Charles J.G. Verge

THE ONE STAMP EXHIBIT: CHANGE FOR SURVIVAL

"Change" is the buzzword of the last few decades. It applies not only to our family, to the political environment, to our work and to our way of life, but also to our leisure time and our hobbies. The One Stamp Exhibit is a good example of where change can help an area of philately survive – if it is in fact in danger. I firmly believe that there is room in our hobby for all aspects of collecting and exhibiting: from traditional philately to maximaphily and from aerophilately to astrophilately. As with any change, exhibitors and judges must be willing to accept change and be flexible how, when and why our hobby adapts.

Single stamp exhibits are most uncommon in Canada. In fact, we had not seen one in a national level exhibition, as far as I know, for many years, until Stephen Ekstrom showed his U.S. 1861-68 3-cent issue at ROYALE*1991 * ROYAL, the 63rd convention of The Royal Philatelic Society of Canada held in Montreal in April 1991. Since then three more have shown up, all at BNAPEX ‘91, the convention of the British North American Philatelic Society held last August in Vancouver. These were The 3-cent Small Queen - perforation 12.5 x 12.5; Canada’s First Airmail Stamp: Rates, Routes and Usages and Canada - Queen Elizabeth: 1973-77 Definitive Issues.

It is my premise that, although exhibitors should continue to show the type of exhibits of single stamps such as that shown by Stephen Ekstrom, those shown at BNAPEX paved the way for the

La collection d’un timbre: Changer pour survivre

Le "changement" est le mot clé des dernières décennies. Il s’applique non seulement à notre famille, à notre environnement politique, à notre travail et à notre style de vie, mais aussi à nos loisirs et à nos passe-temps. La Collection d’un timbre est un exemple concret où le changement peut aider un type de collection à survivre – si, en fait, ce type de collection est en danger. Je crois fermement qu’il y a de la place dans notre passe-temps favori pour tous les types de collection et d’expositions: de la philatélie traditionnelle à la maximaphilie et de l’aerophilatélie à l’astrophilatélie.

Par contre, comme pour la plupart des changements dans d’autres domaines, les juges et les exposants doivent être prêt à accepter le changement et à être flexible sur le quand, le comment et le pourquoi du changement dans notre passe-temps.

Les collections composées d’une étude d’un seul timbre sont rares dans les expositions canadiennes. En fait, si ma mémoire me sert, nous n’en n’avions pas vu une en compétition au niveau national depuis plusieurs années quant apparut celle sur le 3 cent de 1861-68 des États-Unis présentée par Stephen Ekstrom à la 63e Convention de La Société royale de philatélie du Canada: ROYALE * 1991 * ROYAL tenue à Montréal en avril 1991.

Depuis cette date trois autres collections sont apparues en compétition. Toutes les trois à BNAPEX ‘91, la convention de la British North American Society tenue en août dernier à Vancouver: Le 3 cent Petite Reine – dentelée 12.5 x 12.5; Les premiers timbres de poste aérienne survival of this area of exhibiting. The classical Ekstrom-type exhibit deals with the stamp, its development, production, printings, usages and rates, perforations, colours and papers, etc. Although the BNAPEX-type exhibits in all cases used some of the same elements as found in the Ekstrom-type, they added to it elements of the Special Philatelic Studies Exhibit or extended the limits of the definition of a Single Stamp Exhibit. This, in my view, is where survival lies for this type of exhibit.

I will try to describe how each of the three BNAPEX exhibits treated their subject and the reader can see how three exhibitors proceeded, I am sure inadvertently, to extend the parameters of the Single Stamp Exhibit and possibly in some way those of the Special Philatelic Studies Exhibit.

The 3 cent Small Queen – perforation 12.5 x 12.5.

If you read the title page of this exhibit, you will be struck by the very classical approach to the study of what is probably the rarest major variety of this issue. However, the exhibitor gives clues in his introduction that, in fact, he will be dealing with other points as well. "In order to understand the background of the perf. 12.5 . . . . it is necessary to study Canada's First Bill Issue . . . . A point of controversy has long been the location of the first printing, Montreal or Ottawa. . . . a wealth of opportunity for the study of 19th Century Canadian Postal History."

The exhibit unfolds by first starting to explain the perf. 12.5 itself and its relationship to the Bill stamps. The exhibitor illustrates his thesis by using some of the Bill stamps themselves. He then goes on to jump into the controversy as to the location and the printing and perforation of the stamp by utilising trade sample cards, the bill stamps and other Large and Small Queen Stamps. He also indicates his disagreement with both Boggs’ and Jarrett’s theses on the printing and puts forward his own theories.

Mon hypothèse est que même si les exposants continuent à exposer des collections telles que celle présentée par Monsieur Ekstrom, celles montrées à BNAPEX montrent le chemin de la survie et du futur pour ce genre de collection. La collection classique du genre Ekstrom se spécialise dans le timbre, son développement, sa production, ses tirages, ses usages et tarifs, ses dentelures, ses couleurs et types de papier, etc. Quoique les collections à BNAPEX utilisaient, dans tous les cas, certains des mêmes éléments que les collections de type Ekstrom, elles apportaient aussi des éléments nouveaux importés des collections d'Études philatéliques spéciales ou élargissaient la définition des Collections d'un timbre. C'est, à mon point de vue, l'approche qui assurera la survie de ce type de collection.

Je vais essayer de décrire le traitement du sujet utilisé par chacun des exposants et le lecteur pourra voir comment trois collectionneurs se sont pris, par mégarde j'en suis sur, pour élargir les horizons de la Collection d’un timbre et en même temps possiblement ceux des Études philatéliques spéciales.

Le 3 cent Petite Reine – dentelé 12.5 x 12.5

En lisant la page titre de cette collection, on est frappé par la méthode classique d'étude de ce qui est probablement la variété principale de cette émission. Par contre, l'exposant donne, dans son introduction, des indices qu'il traitera de son sujet d'une façon différente. "Afin de comprendre l'histoire du dentelé 12.5 . . . . il faut faire l'étude des premiers timbres de traite (Bill Stamps . . . . Un point de litige a été pendant longtemps l'endroit de la première impression, Montréal ou Ottawa . . . une abondance de possibilités d'étude de l'histoire postale canadienne du 19e siècle."
He then proceeds through the classical elements of a single stamp exhibit to finish up his exhibit with a study of why most used copies on cover are found emanating from two correspondences. The exhibitor illustrates this section with photos, illustrated and advertising covers, post cards and other elements usually found in a Special Philatelic Study Exhibit.

Canada’s First Airmail Stamp: Rates, Routes and Usages.
In this instance the exhibitor has shunned the typical study of the stamp from production to printing including varieties. He concentrates on the reasons why the stamp and its surcharged version were issued (Airmail agreement with the United States on July 20, 1928 and rate increase of July 1, 1931); the commercial usages to illustrate the rates and, instead of FFC, he again uses valid commercial mail to illustrate routes. In reality this, as well as the following exhibit, is a Two Stamp Exhibit. Scott catalogue identifies these two airmail issues as C1 and C3. I believe however, that this is an ingenious way to extend the definition of a Single Stamp Exhibit by joining the traditional and postal history with aerophilately.

Of the three exhibits described here, this is probably the exhibit most within the parameters of the traditional Single Stamp Exhibit and the most modern. Its development is based on a study of varieties, including errors and usage, utilizing a wide range of philatelic elements including: two different printers, four papers, three printing processes, six levels of fluorescence, and four perforation gauges. Here again the exhibitor uses two stamps with the same design in the same series to illustrate what is, in effect, a single stamp printed in two different denominations but with everything else virtually equal (Scott 593 and 593A).

Les premiers timbres de poste aérienne du Canada: tarifs, routes et usages.
Dans cette collection, l’exposant a ignoré l’étude traditionnelle du timbre de sa production à son impression incluant ses variétés. Il concentre ses efforts sur les raisons de l’émission du timbre et de sa version surchargée (Accord de poste aérienne avec les États-Unis du 20 juillet 1928 et la hausse du tarif du premier juillet 1931); les usages commerciaux pour illustrer les tarifs et, au lieu de Pils Premier Vol, il utilise des plis commerciaux pour illustrer les routes suivies. En réalité cette collection, ainsi que la suivante est une Collection de deux timbres. Le catalogue Scott identifie ces deux timbres de poste aérienne comme C1 et C3. Je crois, par contre, que ceci est un façon ingénieuse d’élargir les paramètres de la définition de la Collection d’un timbre en unissant la philatélie traditionnelle et l'histoire postale à l'aerophilathélie.

Des trois collections décrites dans cet
The three exhibits described above may be a way to change the approach to Single Stamp Exhibits while at the same time increasing the flexibility that exhibitors have in getting their exhibits recognized. This may also be the way to improve the knowledge and interest of judges, exhibitors and show goers for what is now called Special Philatelic Studies Exhibits. I firmly believe that this type of exhibit is more popular with new exhibitors, show goers because they show the interesting and human side of philately.

A seminar I just attended on international philatelic judging indicated that every other area of philatelic exhibiting stems from traditional philately. It is nice to see that traditional philately (Single Stamp Exhibits) is flexible and adaptable enough to be combined with other new areas of philately (Special Philatelic Studies) and continue to diversify as it has in the past.

article, la troisième est probablement celle qui représente le plus les paramètres traditionnelles de la Collection d’un timbre et est la plus moderne. Le développement de la collection est basé sur l’étude des variétés, incluant les erreurs et des usages. Il utilise un grand nombre d’éléments philatéliques incluant: deux imprimeurs, quatre papiers, trois méthodes d’impression, six niveaux de marquage et quatre dentelures. Par contre, encore une fois, l’exposant utilise deux timbres ayant le même vignette dans la même série pour illustrer ce qui est en fait, un seul timbre imprimé à deux tarifs différents avec tous les autres éléments demeurant pratiquement les mêmes (Scott 593 et 593A).

Les trois collections décrites ci-haut sont peut-être une façon de changer notre approche aux Collections d’un timbre tout en maintenant la flexibilité des exposants de voir leurs collections reconnues. Ceci servirait aussi à augmenter les connaissances et l’intérêt aux expositions pour ce que l’on appelle dans le moment les Collections d’Études philatéliques spéciales. Je suis fermement convaincu que ce genre de collection est de plus en plus populaire avec les nouveaux exposants et les visiteurs parce qu’elles démontrent l’aspect intéressant et humain de la philatélie.

Un séminaire auquel je viens d’assister, sur l’art de juger au niveau international, indique que tous les domaines de la philatélie one leur ascendance dans la philatélie traditionnelle. Il est bon de voir que la philatélie traditionnelle (Collection d’un timbre) est assez flexible et est capable de s’adapter aux nouveaux domaines de la philatélie (Études philatéliques spéciales) et de se diversifier comme elle l’a fait par le passé.

When did stamp collecting start in Canada? We will never know with any degree of certainty, but the hobby had certainly taken root by the early 1860s in at least two locations – Saint John in New Brunswick and Montreal in what was then Canada East. There were certainly collectors in other locations.

John Reginald Hooper, writing under his pen name of Canadiensis in the March 1891 issue (Vol. 6 No. 3) of The Quaker City Philatelist, published in Philadelphia, made reference to the earliest Canadian philatelic correspondence he had seen.

Can anyone predace Hooper’s 1863 references to written communications between stamp collectors in British North America?

Hooper’s article follows. I wonder if the two covers and their contents still exist.

The First Canadian Collectors
by Canadiensis

In my collection I have two Nova Scotia stamps preserved on the entire original letter. The stamps in themselves are of no great curiosity, being simply the 5c. blue 1860 issue, but the letters are of exceeding interest. I preserve these simply to show that I have the records of the earliest stamp collectors, as far as known, in Canada. If any one can, by either writing or print, prove that there were earlier collectors in the field than I now show, I am sure it will be accepted with great interest. The first letter is as follows:

"Yarmouth, June 27, 1863.
Mr. Frederick H -.
Charlottetown, P.E.I.:
"Dear Sir: – I received your favor of the 1st with the stamps enclosed, for which accept my thanks, and I was glad to hear that I had contributed some little to your collection, as I feared you may have had the most of those sent to you. I have an order from Liverpool, England, for two full sets of N.B., P.E.I., and N.S. stamps, and will trouble you to send me say two full sets of P.E. Island stamps (unused ones) and I will pay the amount for same over to your father in St. John. I am rather out of the way here in getting them. If you have a New Zealand 1 shill., I should like one. I have not had time to attend to them lately. I enclose an Antigua 1d., Prussia 1 silb.gr., Switzerland 40 rappens. If you have anything I have not bear me in mind.

"I am, yours truly, J.W.M. – ."

The second letter is directed to the same person at Charlottetown, P.E. Island:

"Yarmouth, N.S., July 17, 1863.
"My Dear Sir: – I have to own your regardé favor of 6th inst., with two sets P.E. Island stamps, amount 3s. 6d., Island currency, with the Victoria and N.S. Wales stamp, for which you have my thanks. I have written Mr. D.J.S. – – to pay your father 3s. 6d., Island currency, for the above, which appears to be the only way of remitting to you, and which I trust will answer you. You have succeeded very well in your collection. When I come across the N.S. 1 shill., I will bear you in mind. I enclose you Spain 2 reales, Canada 3d., Denmark 4s., Switzerland 1 franc, Hamburg 7, Denmark 2s., Portugal 5 reis, Nova Scotia 2 cts. (new, just issued), and hope these may add to your collection. Should you come across any you think I may not have, send them along if you have duplicates.

I am, dear sir, yours very truly, J.W.M."

There are two or three points worthy of notice in the last letter. One is the scarcity of the N.S. shilling, even at that time; another is the corroboration of the issue of the N.S. 2c. stamp in July, 1863, and lastly, the difficulty of sending small amounts from one province to another in 1863. I do not give the full names as I had not authority to do such, but the letters intact are to be sold with the "J.R.Hooper collection" at auction in New York early in March, where everyone will have a chance to see them.

Having permission to view two post Office files, marked as Confidential (13-10-1 and 2), I came across a short but interesting note from the American Bank Note Co. in New York, dated 21 May 1897. An unidentified officer of the company wrote to the Superintendent of the Postage Stamp Branch in Ottawa that he was sending him as a gift a proof of the 12d. black. The name of the superintendent was E.P. Stanton.

I have mentioned a number of times that an electronic perforation gauge is in the final development stage. Finally, a German company has succeeded in marketing one. No details are yet available, but it is advertised that one can throw away all other perforation gauges, which are in many cases inaccurate, especially when measuring down to two decimal places. More about this gauge will be reported soon.

Some people believe that a single catalogue for Canada is sufficient, and that it is unnecessary to issue more. But when looking at some of them, such as the Scott, and the specialized Canada from Scott and Darnell, one can note that different approaches are being used by each one of them. Often, stamp varieties listed in one are not reported in another. Details given for a stamp in one catalogue may be limited in another. For any serious collector, it is useful to review all published data, and each catalogue may reveal something that a collector could not find elsewhere.
Vignettes of Early British North American Postal History

by J.C. Arnell, F.R.P.S.C.

XXI. A Naval Letter with a Pognant Aftermath

On several occasions in the past I have written about the contents of early transatlantic letters. This is another such, in part because of its interesting contents about a part of Canada which does not figure very prominently in early B.N.A. postal history, but also because of the poignant addition found within it.

The letter illustrated here was written by Captain Edward Wrottesley, Commander of H.M. Brig Sabine, to his wife from St. John's, Newfoundland on 21 May 1814. Edward Wrottesley was the fifth son of Sir John Wrottesley, Baronet of an ancient line of baronets of Shropshire. The family seat was Wrottesley Park, five miles from Wolverhampton on the Shrewsbury road.

As the letter is a fairly straightforward narrative of events of the time, in spite of beginning 'My dearest Love', it is transcribed in its entirety below. In reading this account, the reader should bear in mind that the Sabine was a small, two-masted brig-sloop of eighteen guns, 96 feet long and 28'1/2 feet beam. It was originally a French vessel, the Requin, which had been captured in the Mediterranean by H.M.S. Volage on 28 July 1808 and taken into the Royal Navy, where she served until 1818, when she was sold to be broken up. With square sails, she would have been difficult to handle in a storm or when traversing a field of floating sea-ice.

"After a most tedious Passage I have at length arrived, but not without experiencing more difficulties than you can imagine upon this dreary Coast. A very short time after sailing we encountered the heaviest Gale of Wind I ever remember, and lasted without abating for five days, when my faithfull Chronometer deemed us near the Banks. We met with islands and fields of ice for near 300 miles, and it was not without considerable difficulty we extricated ourselves. I chased a Privateer three days ago with one hundred and ten Men on board, she had committed considerable damage on the Coast, and had the impudence to tell the General by a Master of a Vessell which he had captured that he intended to blockade the Port.

"Do not be sanguine but I think Money is to be made here. (He was referring to the possibility of getting prize money for enemy vessels captured and sent into port for condemnation.) The Admiral has not arrived, and I am Major Domo but I am trying to get to Sea. The News of Peace has just arrived, and I am highly pleased with . . . ? . . . 's Conduct, but shall never think it worth the Pen of the Historian to trouble himself about Bonaparte -- The Americans my Friends begin to speak en bas they have requested a cessation of hostilities in Canada which has been refused by Sir J Provost and referred to the Admiral on the American Station, the Embargo is taken off(f) and our Prisoners released, but we have declared the whole Coast in a state of Blockade the Americans are in a miserable state, and their Men of War laid up it is supposed the Men are destined for the Lakes. The Boston Papers insist upon Maddison making Peace on any terms. In this place it is impossible to procure provisions of any description Your amiable Sex during the Winter are obliged to live upon Salt Fish. We are to have a grand Fete in honour of the Peace on the 21st of June next. If I am in Port, I intend to exert all my hilarity not forgetting Polly mine, how often has that expression recurred to my Mind. The Sabine behaves remarkably well in bad Weather but she does not Sail. The opportunity of writing Love is the only one I have had, and the Merchants are looking anxiously for the Sabine to get to Sea. Does ones dear Pledge of affection begin to trouble you Keep in good Spirits Polly we shall soon meet Adieu Dear Love and believe me your truly affectionate Husband Edw Wrottesley”

We can only speculate on what happened to Captain Wrottesley during the following two months, for folded inside this letter was a slightly tattered piece of paper on which was written:

“Here Lies the Body of Captain
Edward Wrottesley
fifth son of Sir John
Wrottesley Bart
Commander of H.M. Brig
Sabine
who died July 29th, 1814
Aged 29 Years.
N.B. The above is the true copy of the Tombstone
William Earle
Clerk of Saint Johns Church”

Presumably the above letter was the last that Polly Wrottesley received from her husband and when the copy of the inscription arrived, she placed it inside the letter, where it has been for over one hundred and seventy-five years. Perhaps Don Wilson, our St. John’s, Newfoundland group member, can find something in the local church records or elsewhere to fill in the two months between the letter and Edward’s death.

Proof Strikes of Canada: Edited by J. Paul Hughes; Published by Robert A. Lee Philatelist Ltd.; 203-1139 Sutherland Avenue, Kelowna, B.C., Canada V1Y 5Y2. Softbound 8-1/2 x 11: Fifteen volumes so far and continuing. Various funds between approximately $20 and $30 each in Canadian funds postpaid from the publisher. Write for a price list.

These books have brought order out of chaos at the Canadian Postal Museum, whose archival material has now been transferred to the Canadian Archives with a competent archivist, Tom Hillman, in charge of the postal material. The impressions are from the original proof books, where available, otherwise from photostatic copies of proofs held elsewhere, such as London, U.K. or N.Y.C. No attempt has been made to improve the impressions, and what you see is what there was to get. In a very few cases, it might, and I underscore might, have been helpful to include a typescript of the lettering on the cancelling device where they appear to be weak and/or indistinct.

Perhaps it is best to quote from the brief introduction, rather strangely omitted from Volume 1, but found in every other Volume, updated by the inclusion of publication dates as they became known, starting in 1989. "The emergence of 'postal history' as an important field of philately has led to the publishing of a number of fine reference works. Included amongst these articles, books, and journals are listings of post offices in almost every province and territory in Canada from day one, for split circles, full circles, railroad post offices, duplexes, squared circles, etc.

One area that has not been readily available are the proof strikes. They are available on microfilm and to those collectors and researchers visiting or living in the Ottawa area, although finding a specific town or hammer (cancelling device) type is a formidable task.

The purpose of this series of books is to present all of the proof strikes available in Ottawa in a logical and straightforward manner; first by hammer type, second by province, and thirdly alphabetically."

Publishing began in the fall of 1989 with "SPLIT CIRCLES" in four volumes: Western, Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritimes; followed by "DUPLEXES" in 1990; "FULL CIRCLES" in 1991; and "REGISTRATION MARKINGS" in January of 1992. Still to come are the Railroad Post Offices; Roller Cancellations; Directional and Postage Due Markings; Military; Inter Office, Customs and Excise Markings; Moon, Moto, Mood and Pocons; and lastly Miscellaneous Markings.

Having attempted to record the Registration Proof Strikes which were in Proof Books kept in the Canadian Post Office Department Library in 1966-69, and never finding them in the same location twice, I can attest to the facilitation that these books bring to the postal historian, no matter how close he may live to Ottawa, because of the organization which Mr. Hughes has brought to an essentially unorganized collection of proof strikes, in the case of the Pritchard and Andrews Proof Books, pasted down as they were produced chronologically front to back and then back to front, on the reverse side of the pages. When I was there some 25 years ago, the glue had dried out on many of the strikes pasted in the books, and some few strikes had come loose. Over time and with transfers of these earlier books from location to location, it is nearly certain that some, if not many of the proof strikes have been lost. However, Mr. Hughes has provided a very valuable service to postal historians by his organization of the contents of these books into usable form. Every philatelic library should have a set, and most collectors of Canada.
Postal History should own a set for the Province or area collected.

A checklist of the stamps of all the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man. Information is given on designers, printers, papers, plate numbers, sheet size, quantities sold etc. First Day Covers, miniature and presentation sheets, gutter pairs, stamp booklets, postal stationery and much more are all listed. Stamps are priced in both mint and used condition.

Included in the checklist are the German Occupation issues, the 1958-59 Regionals and the Independent Postal Administration issues.

This publication is an ideal companion to the Channel Islands Postal History catalogue published by Stanley Gibbons a few months ago.

The increasing interest in the stamps of many foreign countries is reflected in the popularity of the new editions of the Stanley Gibbons foreign country volumes. The 3rd edition of Part 18, Japan and Korea fully illustrates and describes the stamps of these popular countries. Both South Korea and North Korea are included. New features in this edition are the foreign post offices operating in Japan and the Chinese post offices in Korea. Prices in this edition remain fairly steady with large increases for early Japan, Korean Empire, U.S. Administration of South Korea and for the increasingly popular thematic stamps of North Korea. Collectors of these countries will certainly want a copy of this catalogue particularly since the previous edition was issued 8 years ago in 1984.

This new thematic catalogue lists upwards of 3500 different stamps depicting some 1600 insect species. Not surprisingly, butterflies and moths form a good proportion of these but a substantial number of beetles, flies, wasps and other rather less appealing creatures have also appeared on stamps in recent years. Arachnida (scorpions and spiders) and Diplopoda (millipedes) are also included since many collectors incorporate them in insect collections and they often appear in sets of ‘Insect’ stamps.
The style follows that established so successfully by earlier Stanley Gibbons thematic catalogues with the main body of the book being devoted to a country listing based on Stamps of the World. This does not include variations of watermark, shade or perforation but overprinted and surcharged stamps are listed as are miniature sheets where they form a natural extension of the stamp series. The country section is followed by species and systematic indexes, itemizing the many insects which have appeared on stamps according to their scientific names and referring back to the country listing — thus, if you are only interested in stamps depicting stag beetles or scorpions, these may be easily identified.

The catalogue has been compiled by Albert Coles and Timothy Phipps of the Butterfly and Moth Stamp Society. They are to be congratulated on having successfully overcome a number of problems, not the least of which being the fact that entomologists are not always agreed as to the correct division of insects into their orders. Some species also differ in appearance according to their geographical location while male and female insects of the same species can also appear to be different. This quite apart from the fact that many insects which have appeared on stamps are not specifically identified while there have been a number of errors of artwork or captioning over the years.

Prices, as in previous thematic catalogues, are given in complete sets, or individually where other stamps in the set are not relevant to the theme.

A fine thematic catalogue which is sure to be welcomed by existing collectors of this increasingly popular field and should assist in promoting interest in the topic in the future.

Stanley Gibbons Publications Ltd., 5 Parkside, Ringwood, Hant. BH24 3SH, ISBN: 085259-312-0, soft cover, illustrated in black and white, 240 pages, 13.8 x 21.4 cm, (5-7/16" x 8-3/8"), Price £12.95 plus postage £2.75 (U.K.) £5.00 other countries. Available from the publishers, also stamp dealers and booksellers.

This new, first edition, catalogue provides an update to the postal history section of the Channel Islands Specialized catalogue last published in 1983 adding also the section on slogan postmarks and special handstamps, included in the original 1979 catalogue but omitted from the 1983 edition in order to conserve space.

In 23 chapters it covers all aspects of the postal history of the islands from the Letter Forwarding Agents, active from the latter part of the 17th century, right up to the latest special handstamps of the Independent postal administrations. Pre-adhesive markings, ship letters, military mail, mail between the Channel Islands and France and the mails of the German occupation period, including red cross messages and prisoner of war and internee mail, are all covered in considerable detail.

There have been extensive revisions made to several sections both as a result of recent discoveries and as current research has shed new light upon previously listed items. The "Alderney Maltese Cross" is, for example, no longer listed; as recent investigations have shown it to have been applied on the mainland. Three of the six sub-post office markings formerly described as "recorded as opened but for which no cancellations have yet been found" are now listed and priced — that for Great Union Road, Jersey being valued at £500!

Not surprisingly after 8-1/2 years, prices have been subject to a considerable amount of revision; however, the degree of change in some sections is even more dramatic than might have been expected. A 2d Mulready with Guernsey or Jersey markings, for example, quadruples in price from £300 to £1200 while many postage due markings and military mail items are up by a similar proportion, as are some of the sub-post office cancellations. Even these are cast in the shade, however, by the cachets of some of the smaller islands which may be found on Edwardian postcards; the two Jethou cachets, for instance, previously priced at £30 and £35 are raised ten times to £300 and £350 respectively.

Prepared, as in the past, with the assistance of the Channel Islands Specialist Society, this is an authoritativey written and professionally produced handbook/catalogue which must surely provide an invaluable work of reference for the Channel Islands collector.

Prior to the publication of this new edition this specialized stamp catalogue has been out of print for some months. Before 1988 the decimal definitive and special issues were combined in a single volume. Owing to the increase in stamp issues the work was split into Volume 4—Definitive and Volume 5—Special issues.

The now well established format, providing complete specialised listings for all issues up to the 1991 set commemorating the Bicentenary of the Ordnance Survey and repeating from volume 4 the short term definitives issued in 1990 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of uniform penny postage and the Penny Black (together with their associated booklets and booklet panes).

Owing to technical advances and improved quality control, it is noticeable that there are very few missing colours or positional varieties turning up on special issues these days, although the occasional imperf does slip through and the 1990 'seahorse' miniature sheet is listed imperforate and also with the recess printing inverted or omitted completely (all are unpriced). New discoveries on older issues continue to provide additional items for listing in the earlier part of the catalogue, a case in point being the 1982 29p cars stamp with the black printing quadrupled.

Prices for basis stamps are unchanged from the current edition of Collect British Stamps (published in November) but those for items such as varieties and cylinder blocks which appear only in the Specialized Catalogue have been subjected to the usual careful revision.

If you specialize in Great Britain you will want a copy of this publication.

DEMANDES D'ECHANGE
La Société royale de philatélie du Canada ne s'occupe pas normalement des échanges entre philatélistes, mais comme elle est la société philatélique nationale du Canada, ou lui transmet de nombreuses demandes de philatélistes désireux de trouver des correspondants pour échanger des timbres. Ainsi a-t-elle décidé, pour rendre service à ses membres, d'outre-mer, afin que ceux qui désirent établir des rapports avec eux puissent la faire. Je vous signale toutefois que nous ne savons rien des personnes qui nous demandent de publier leur nom, c'est pourquoi je vous conseille d'être prudent en répondant à ces demandes d'échange.

Only by attaining high awards in National exhibitions can exhibitors expect to be accepted to competition in International/World exhibitions. Generally a vermeil medal and occasionally a large silver medal will qualify your exhibit for International competition. Les exposants désirant de compétitionner au niveau international se doivent d'obtenir de bons résultats dans les Expositions nationales. En général, une médaille de Vermeil et quelques fois une grande médaille d'Argent qualifient votre collection pour la compétition internationale.
