Technology and the future of collecting is a topic I promised to review a number of issues ago.

To start, let me be very clear as Tricky Dicky was wont to say. I have long since learned not to mess with predictions about the future despite the desire to appear learned when doing so. As a member of the former Science Council of Canada, I spent many an hour listening to aggressive debates on how a group of scientists, businessmen and engineers should recommend to government which of the new ideas or technologies we should suggest it support. "Picking winners" was what we called it. The recommendations always favoured 'methods' or 'means' of development applicable to any new process, idea or thing rather than putting our eggs in one basket.

Certainly there have been predictions about the look of the future for a very long time. Clairvoyants still stick their necks out. Even scientists did so in 1939 at the New York World's Fair. Specifically, at its close many scientists were queried on their views of the world as they then saw it. I believe it was 50 years later in 1989 that someone got the bright idea to check these forecasts. Most foresaw World War II, space flight, new cars, new materials, some climate change, the increasing urbanization of the world, the population explosion, television, etc. Most had an optimistic view of the future and a more peaceful world.

However, they all missed the one invention or idea that would revolutionize our society and affect every aspect of daily life. It was the microchip. Computers were then known but no one could see the fabulous advantages in communications brought on by the micro-miniaturization of calculations and control. Even the start of 1999, with the introduction of the Euro, continues the pace toward the shrinking of the world and the instantaneous spread of ideas, money and pictures. So the new technologies of handling communications now almost govern our world.

But what effect do these new technologies have on collecting? How do they affect you and impinge on your stamp collecting habits. For simplicity I will focus on computer technology so little recognized by the World's Fair scientists. Alexander Graham Bell, with his telephone terminal, connected the world with considerable expense and trouble. Today, we have a computer terminal and a worldwide web and can travel the globe much more simply.

Micro-computers on individual disks can do a lot for stamp collectors. I'm sure most of us know about its convenience. On your computer you can construct all sorts of lists, addresses, collecting wants, library holdings, things of interest from the latest stamp journals, etc.

Anything that needs to be revised or updated can so easily be handled without having to start from scratch, as it were. Want to write an article for your journal, The Canadian Philatelist? Do so with one of the many types of word processing software, edit at will, delete, mix, etc. It's very easy. I readily admit that we old-timers may be scared of this new technology - so then get your granddaughter to do it the first time. Believe me, they are only too glad to help. Don't ask her to type a 20 page paper, however, without fair remuneration. That way, we all win.

But what can you do if you can't type well, and have no granddaughter at hand? Don't fret. Get one of the voice recognition software packages. You speak to it via a microphone and your computer transcribes your voice directly to text. My arthritis has forced me to try this method, as the old fingers can't keep up with my failing brain, and this method saves time and frustration.

Another great boon of the computer is the use of page maker software. With this you can design your own album pages, use text to describe each item, and make the little frames for each stamp and move them around on the page.

The next step is to join collectors together. So join the internet - the wide web. Now you can 'talk' to other collectors, seek information or advice - there is no end to what you can do. It's like the telephone system with the added ability to send and receive pictures as well. The possibilities are unlimited. I've seen a very senior citizen at our club take beautiful pictures of Nova Scotia stamps, amend the pictures on disk to produce logos and letterheads of great beauty and quality.

However, the use of the computer goes beyond its helpfulness for individual collectors. Selling and buying of philatelic items is perhaps where the future of the internet is for collectors. A number of auction firms list their lots on the web and you bid as before. One step further is to list your own items that you wish to sell, or, as it is now done, use E-Bay or other internet sites. These are firms that lists your lots and when they sell, take the money, send the other collector's money to you and the items to him. Small listing fees and selling commissions are charged as in regular auctions.

Consider how much less expensive it is for larger auction houses to transmit their catalogues over the 'net'. The next step coming very shortly, will be another site that deals only in cash transactions - direct from your account to the seller's account through a blind intermediate so that your account numbers or balances or signature are never revealed.

Will the 'net' replace mail? Yes, by an ever-growing fraction. E-post, as the Finns call it, will supplant some regular letters. In 1997 the Finnish post office's e-post transmitted 37 million electronic letters. Not bad for a country only one-fifth Canada's size. But before the really big bit comes we must await the day when each household has a computer, the software and the net connection. Likely this time must await the sending of such messages either over your regular telephone line or your cable connection, neither of which may be long distance.

A good measure of the impact of electronic mail is the current campaign launched by Canada Post to have people go back to writing more letters. I doubt if the appeal will have any real effect and the number of letters will continue to shrink. Hopefully, this will mean faster service and nicer cancels so all may not be lost. However, we should also think about the decline in the numbers of letters on the production of stamps, particularly commemoratives, by Canada Post (and other national postal services).
These notes are written in mid-February – a little in advance of the official arrival of spring. But as I look around the “Royal” new things seem to be popping up all over and it’s easy to get that Spring Fever feeling.

The new Philatelist is earning a great deal of favourable comment and praise. The new size and improved presentation move our publication into the new century. Congratulations are due to our editor J.J. MacDonald and to his faithful contributing writers. Our vice-president Charles Verge deserves a lot of credit too – his vision and energy are behind much of the change and improvement and he has worked hard to increase our advertising revenues.

Many members have been concerned about the future of our Royal Sales Circuit program. I am pleased to report that arrangements have been concluded with a new Sales Circuit operator. We are confident that individual and Chapter subscribers will continue to benefit from this important membership privilege. I would like to acknowledge the excellent past service provided by our previous manager, Mollie Krajelewski and to introduce our new operator, Dwayne Miner. Dwayne has been in the stamp business for many years and has an excellent understanding of collector needs and interests. His goal is to build the Sales Circuit program into a flagship operation and I look forward with some excitement to becoming a Sales Circuit subscriber myself.

Spring also brings our Royal Convention and, this year, the opportunity to discover New Brunswick. The Fredericton committee, led by our Director Graham McCleave and others, has put together an interesting and exciting program and a great stamp weekend is assured. Many of Canada’s elite dealers will be present and we again enjoy the support of our Canada Post partners. Early planning is a good idea – it’s not too early at all to make your travel arrangements.

An important part of our annual meeting is the election of Directors and the appointment of Officers. Members are invited to participate in the elections by mail and to attend the annual meeting which is traditionally scheduled for the Saturday morning of the convention. I wish to thank our members for their continued support and interest and look forward to meeting many of you in Fredericton.

Ces quelques pensées auront été rédigées à la mi-février, encore un peu en avance pour l’arrivée officielle du printemps, mais si je regarde autour de moi, quelques nouveautés “royales” semblent poindre ici et là, et il est difficile de ne pas sentir le printemps dans l’air!

De nombreux membres étaient inquiets quant à l’avenir de notre programme royal de circuit des ventes. Je suis heureux de les informer que nous avons pris des dispositions avec un nouvel opérateur de circuit des ventes. Nous sommes confiants que les membres individuels et de sections continueront à profiter de cet important privilège. J’aimerais rendre hommage à l’excellent travail de notre ancienne directrice Mollie Krajelewski et souhaiter la bienvenue à notre nouvel opérateur Dwayne Miner. Dwayne travaille dans le milieu philatélique depuis de nombreuses années et connaît extrêmement bien les besoins et les intérêts des collectionneurs. Il entend développer le programme de circuit des ventes en une opération vedette et je suis moi-même impatient de m’y inscrire.

Avec le printemps arrivera notre congrès royal avec, cette année, l’occasion de découvrir le Nouveau-Brunswick. Le comité de Fredericton, mené par notre directeur Graham McCleave et d’autres, a élabore un programme intéressant et palpitant, et nous pouvons dès maintenant anticiper un weekend philatélique couronné de succès. De nombreux négociants d’élite nationaux y seront présents et nous profiterons une fois encore de l’appui de notre partenaire Postes Canada. Il est judicieux de planifier à l’avance et il n’est pas trop tôt pour commencer à préparer votre voyage.

Notre réunion annuelle verra l’élection de nos directeurs et la nomination des administrateurs. Les membres sont invités à participer aux élections par courrier et à participer à la réunion annuelle traditionnellement prévue le samedi matin du congrès. Merci à tous nos membres pour leur fidèle soutien et leur intérêt, et à bientôt le plaisir de vous rencontrer à Fredericton.

The Canadian Philatelist / Le philatéliste canadien

PART 5

Organ

Besides being an organist, choir director, teacher, and prolific composer, Healey Willan was also a philatelist. A 1980 joint issue (S860-1) honoured Willan (on the occasion of his birth centenary) and Emma Albani (50 years after her death). The stamp shows Willan seated at the organ of St. Paul’s Anglican Church in Toronto. He was the organist and choirmaster at the church from shortly after his arrival in Canada in 1913 to 1921.

Piano

Canada’s "Queen of Opera", Emma Albani, was philatelically commemorated in 1980 as noted above.

An extraordinarily talented musician, she sang, she composed several works, and she played the harp and piano. A piano appears on the stamp.

The 1993 set honouring CPR hotels includes a piano on the Royal York stamp (S1469). This piano was chosen as a symbol of the Imperial Room at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto and was not intended to portray a specific instrument. In its early days, the Imperial Room was well-known for dining and dancing. Later on, it functioned for a time as a supper club, featuring such celebrities as Sophie Tucker, Peggy Lee, Marlene Dietrich, Roy Orbison, and Ella Fitzgerald, to name but a few.

West”, by Montreal artist Berge Missakian; included in the illustration is a stylized piano. Missakian’s works often feature musical themes such as jazz and blues.

Posthorn – see Horn

Recorder

The recorder is easy to play at a basic level and as such is particularly well suited to children and amateur musicians, although professional recorder players of course achieve a high standard of proficiency. Modern recorders generally come in four sizes: soprano (or descant in British usage); alto (British treble); tenor; bass. A soprano recorder is shown on the 50-cent denomination (S686) of the 1976 Olympic Arts and Culture set.

Saxophone

Like the recorder, there are several sizes of saxophone. These range from soprano all the way down to contrabass. An alto saxophone appears on the same 1976 Olympics stamp which includes a recorder (S686). As well, Friedenthal reports a 1988 06 17 handstamp which includes a saxophone; he refers to an item which appeared in The Canadian Philatelist 40:4.

Serpent

Yes: it is a musical instrument. In the 16th century, a bass version of a medieval instrument called a cornett (not to be confused with a contemporary cornet) was developed. It was bent into a clumsy serpentine shape to bring the finger holes within reach of the hands, hence its name serpent. It is featured on the cachet on the OFDC of the 1981 "Look of Music" stamp (S878).

Tambourine

A tambourine appears on the 1982 stamp honouring the Salvation Army (S954). Musical activities are an important part of this organization’s religious and charitable ministry.

Tambourines were used in the bands appearing at meetings, concerts, and services as early as 1883, the year after the Salvation Army started its evangelical work in Canada.

Trombone

The trombone is one of the instruments on the 1984 MSO stamp, and several trombones are included in the photo on the OFDC.

Trumpet

As mentioned earlier, the trumpet is often referred to as a horn, and there are several examples showing “horns” which are in fact trumpets. A cachet on a 1970 Rose Craft cover for the Christmas issue, the FD cancel for the 1986 Christmas set, and the cachet on the OFDC for the 1997 Christmas issue all show an angel playing a trumpet. The Christmas 1998 45-cent denomination features a wood sculpture, gilded with gold leaf of the angel of the Last Judgement playing a trumpet; the same angel also appears on the cover of the booklet of 10 stamps.

There are a couple of non-Christmas examples: a reveller on the 1979 Quebec Carnival stamp ($780) plays a trumpet, and an orchestral trumpet appears on the 1984 MSO stamp.

Tuba

Violin

The violin or fiddle – colloquial term for the violin and other violin-like instruments, especially folk varieties which accompany folk dancing – has made a number of appearances on Canadian stamps. As well as country fiddling, there is regional or ethnic fiddling, such as French-Canadian, Scottish or Cape Breton fiddling. The continuous history of fiddling in Canada, from the 17th century to the present, makes it one of our strongest musical traditions. There are plenty of examples in Canadian philately:

The 1962 Education stamp ($396) includes a violin in the bottom left corner. A violin and bow are depicted on the 1976 Olympic Arts and Culture stamp mentioned earlier ($686).

The MSO stamp includes three musicians playing the violin (although it could be two violins and a viola – it’s hard to tell), and several violinists can be seen in the photo on the OFDC.

A woman playing the violin is one of two musicians on S1253, part of the Performing Arts set.

The FD cancel for the 1993 folk songs set ($1491/4) shows a man playing a fiddle. No particular fiddler is portrayed in this image; it was selected as being appropriate to folk music and folk singing in general and to the Newfoundland ditty in particular.

The 1994 La Bolduc stamp, described and illustrated in the first installment of this series The Canadian Philatelist, v. 49, n. 4, July/Aug. 1998, p. 262) includes a fiddler.

The 1997 Royal Agricultural Winter Fair commemorative includes a fiddle. This instrument was chosen to symbolize the informal musical gatherings held by exhibitors and their families during the time they spent at the exhibition. To entertain themselves in their spare time, some brought musical instruments along, very often fiddles. As well, Old Time Fiddling competitions have been a part of the Royal over the years.

Violoncello

A violoncello, frequently referred to in its abbreviated form cello, can be seen in the photo on the OFDC of the 1984 MSO stamp.

The Edward VIII Postage Stamp Essay

Paul J. Henry

Introduction

On December 11th, 1936, Edward VIII, King of Great Britain, of the British Dominions and Colonies, and Emperor of India, abdicated the throne in favour of his brother Albert, the Duke of York, who became George VI. The impact on the various governments within the British Empire was untold. Edward’s Coronation had been set for the 12th of May 1937. Preparations were well on their way for both his Coronation, and for the various philatelic and numismatic items which would bear his portrait. Immediately following his abdication, the governments of Great Britain and Canada moved swiftly to destroy or otherwise bury all images of Edward that had been created for the coinage, stamp, and fiduciary tender of the Realm. Preparations then began for the swift introduction of new materials to bear the portrait of the new king.

Over the intervening 60 years since the events of December 1936, many theories have been raised to explain the eventual fate of the philatelic materials — the dies, proofs, and master copies, that were produced for the Edward VIII issue. For many years, the official word was that they were all destroyed. A.S. Deaville, chief of the Philatelic Division at the Post Office Department, writing in 1938, said:

I shall not soon forget the gloomy afternoon of the 27th of last January [1937], when a small group of Officers of the Post Office Department and the Canadian Bank Note Co. forgathered to witness defacement and destruction of the dies, transfer-roll and die-proofs that had been made in connection with the Edward VIII stamps.

Robson Lowe, however, in his The Encyclopedia of British Empire Postage Stamps, wrote that “an essay for the 3 cents value was prepared and a die-proof in green is known”. He indicates that the three-cent proof sold at an auction in April 1971.

Finally, in an article published in a 1978 issue of BNA Topics, Jim Kraemer, then Manager of the National Postal Museum in Ottawa, wrote: “The 3-cent die-proof which has been attributed to the King Edward VIII issue (Robson Lowe’s Encyclopaedia, vol. V, p. 261) is in fact an early stage in the production of the King George VI issue, for which the first model was produced on 21 January 1937.”

A two-cent die-proof, in red, was to appear in the 1990 American Bank Note Co. Archives sale, and later at CAPEX ’96 (the premier philatelic exhibition held in Toronto in June 1996).

It is the purpose of this paper to examine the events surrounding the demise of the Edward VIII issue, and its connection to the first George VI issue, and to clarify the status of the die-proof essays relating to Edward.

The Death of George V

George V died on 20 January 1936. On 23 January, a memorandum was prepared by the Canadian Post Office Authorities questioning previous practice “in regard to previous issues on the accession of a new Monarch.”

By appealing to precedence, the post office hoped to alleviate any problems with new stamp issues. In the case of George V, there were already a large supply of stamps ready for issue. “Considerations of respect to the deceased sovereign, and less sentimental motivations of expediency and economy” usually dictate that a certain period of time expire before the issuing of a new stamp bearing the portrait of the new king becomes necessary. In addition, in both cases where a sovereign seceded to the throne, since the introduction of postage stamps, no stamp issue was made before their coronation.

The Design is Approved

The process by which a postage stamp is prepared, approved, and finally printed, is a long one. In the case of Edward, it was the wish of the king that only an authorized portrait be used.

On 27 January 1936, the Post Office Department contacted the under-secretary of State to obtain an authorized portrait. The State Office then contacted London to determine what portraits were available, and make the necessary arrangements. At that time, post office officials were concerned as to whether they would have to wait until after the Coronation to issue new stamps. It was soon decided, however, to proceed with the request to obtain an authorized photograph. A letter was soon drafted and sent from the office of J.C. Elliot, Postmaster General, to Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada in Britain.

On 27 March, Mr. Massey replied that he had been in touch with the Private Secretary to the King, and that a photograph was forthcoming. Six days later, a confidential letter was received by the Postmaster General from Massey, with a copy of the photograph enclosed. Accompanying the photograph was a memorandum from the Private Secretary to the king, indicating that the King wished to approve any designs. Although this approval was requested, it was not required. Writing to the Postmaster General, H.E. Atwater, the Post Office Department Financial Superintendent indicated that:

There is nothing in the Canadian statutes to require that the King should personally approve of designs used in Canadian postage stamps. This practice seems to have been followed as a matter of courtesy to the reigning Monarch for a considerable number of years.

It was estimated in April that it would take “up to six months to print the necessary stock”.

On 19 May, the approved photograph was submitted to the Canadian Bank Note Co., the firm responsible for the printing of all Canadian stamps and currency during this period. At the same time, on 30 May, a letter was sent to the Master of the Royal Mint from the Post Office Department, requesting another photograph of the King, this one a photograph of the design used to create Canadian coinage.

The approved photograph, in the meantime, was used to create a model, and on 22 June 1936, it was submitted to the Post Office Department. On 29 July, the model was returned to the Canadian Bank Note Co. due to defects. “There is just one criticism which might be warranted, namely, that there is too much of the neck and shoulder showing,” wrote Atwater to P.J. Wood, vice-president of the Canadian Bank Note Co. Its return was anticipated, however, as the bank note company had already been hard at work on its second model using the photograph obtained from the Mint. Writing on 15 June to his colleague H.R. Treadwell of the American Bank Note Co., P.J. Wood said:

“...the indications are the Government will not use the profile portrait of His..."
Majesty King Edward VIII which he supplied for making a model and within three or four months will furnish us with a coin bearing a medallion picture of His Majesty to be used by the engraver.\textsuperscript{13}

By 10 August, the Canadian Bank Note Co. informed the Post Office Department that the second model was well underway. It was to be a similar design, with the changes suggested by Atwater. The post office had been concerned that since the first stamp issue of a new Sovereign is the most scrutinized, the proportions on the stamp should be as clean as possible.\textsuperscript{14} This design featured a profile of Edward with a shorter neck, and facing to the right.

For the second model, a one-cent and two-cent design was created.\textsuperscript{15}

On 24 August the two-cent model was submitted to the Post Office Department by the Canadian Bank Note Co., and it was forwarded to the Deputy Postmaster General by H.E. Atwater.\textsuperscript{16}

On 10 September, a memorandum from P.T. Cooligan, the Assistant Deputy Postmaster General, indicated that the design was approved in principle, however, several changes were to be made, including a partial redesign of the crown and its placement in the upper right and left corners, and a directive that the King’s head be reversed. Says Cooligan:

It is recommended that the Canadian design should be changed to face the left for the reason that the parting of the King’s hair appears on the right whereas he actually parts it on the left.\textsuperscript{17}

He further notes that although it was reported that as each succeeding Sovereign comes to the throne, the position of the head on stamps and coins is reversed, this was not necessarily the case. These instructions were conveyed to the Canadian Bank Note Co., and an internal order sheet, dated 14 September 1936, requested that changes be made to the two-cent model.\textsuperscript{18}

By 16 October, it was clear that the Post Office Department wished to use the plaster cast utilized by the Mint, and on 19 October, the Postmaster General wrote the High Commissioner in London requesting the plaster cast.\textsuperscript{19} It is this model, sculpted by British designer Hugh Paget, that eventually was to be used for the stamps bearing Edward’s profile. The model is about 10 inches in diameter, formed from a mixture of artists’ powders and metal. It depicts Edward VIII in uncrowned effigy. Two of these models were delivered to Canada, one to the Canadian Mint and the other, eventually, to the Postmaster General’s office for delivery to the Canadian Bank Note Co.\textsuperscript{20}

Both of these models were to be saved from destruction, however, the first by Emmanuel Hahn — the engraver of Canada’s Edward VIII coinage, and the second by A.S. Deaville of the Post Office Department. Deaville’s copy was to be acquired by the Nickle Foundation in 1965, and is now displayed in the Glenbow in Calgary.\textsuperscript{21}

On 20 November 1936, Percy Wood of the Canadian Bank Note Co. wrote his colleague, Mr. Treadwell at the American Bank Note Co. in New York, acknowledging the receipt of two die impressions, from dies engraved by Edwin Gunn, of the third (approved) two-cent model, one in #53 green, and the other in red, as well as an original photograph of the plaster cast which was to be used by the engravers to create yet another die impression.\textsuperscript{22} Four days later, the improved design was submitted to the Post Office Department for consideration. Wrote Wood to Atwater, “we believe you will agree we have engraved a true likeness of His Majesty as it appears on the medal and we sincerely trust that the proof will meet with your approval”.\textsuperscript{23}
The Abdication of Edward

Unfortunately, while the dieproofs were still at sea, Edward VIII abdicated. The Post Office Department quickly telegraphed Massey to request that he return them as soon as they were received, which he did.26

Meanwhile, the Post Office Department was running out of stamps in stock. In a letter dated 9 December, H.E. Atwater queried T.R. Legault of the accounting department to determine the number of stamps available for issue.27 The next day, Legault replied that there were approximately 146 million stamps in the one-, two-, and three-cent denominations, and 12 million of other denominations.28 This amounted to only three to four months supply of the lower denominations. On 15 December, Atwater directed Legault to control distribution until the situation could be remedied.29

Reaction to the events of 11 December was varied. In an article in The Morning Citizen, on 14 December 1936, it was reported that Britain would continue to print King Edward VIII stamps.30 In Canada, however, the Rt. Hon. W.L. Mackenzie King took the King's abdication as a personal affront. Accordingly, instructions were given from the Prime Minister that, "every vestige of the now abhorred Edward's image was to be destroyed."31 Atwater, in the meantime, had proposed that the Post Office Department go ahead with the distribution of Edward VIII stamps, due to the dwindling supply of George V stamps, and the fact that the new stamp was ready for production. He argued that releasing a stamp bearing a portrait of Edward VIII would not be out of the question due to the fact that the post office continued to issue stamps for many months after the death of a reigning Monarch. He believed that a limited distribution of 200 million stamps would suffice in order to give the Canadian Bank Note Co. sufficient time to produce a stamp bearing the portrait of George VI.32 His plan was to remain unrealized.

In a letter to philatelist A.F. Brophy in Montreal, on 16 December, Atwater expressed his frustration at the process, "You can imagine the state we are in at the present time due to the abdication of King Edward VIII. We now have to consider a new issue for the new King."33 Writing on 4 January 1937, a saddened Atwater reported to Colonel George P. Vanier, Secretary to the High Commission in London, that:

The Government has decided not to issue any King Edward VIII stamps, and for that reason it is necessary to discontinue all work on the engraving of dies and printing plates. As you may be aware, all dies not used for stamp issues are destroyed. 34

Atwater, however, did not wish to see any of the material used in the production of the Edward stamp wasted, and on 11 January, in a letter to Percy Wood of the Canadian Bank Note Co., he indicated that he was in the process of trying to get the authority to use the design of the King Edward stamp, with only the portrait of the King changed. This action was later approved, and the frame created for the Edward VIII stamp issue was incorporated into the design for the George VI issue. 35

The proofs, dies, and master copies, however, were to be destroyed, as per the orders of the Government of Canada.

On 22 January 1937, P.J. Wood wrote to Atwater indicating those proofs on hand, as approved on 27 November 1936. Three days later, on 25 January, fifty-two of the XG-626 die-proofs were cremated, and witnessed by Arnold Reece, Manager of the Engraving department, with the remaining die-proofs, dies, and transfer rolls destroyed on 27 January in the presence of numerous officials, including Atwater, Wood, and Deaville. 37

Conclusion

How die-proof XG-626 survived this destruction order is not known. The only possibility is that this die-proof was one of the three die-proofs (one in red, one in green, and one in brown) transferred to the Canadian Bank Note Co. by the Post Office Department on 20 January 1937 to assist in the production of the George VI stamp. 36 If the die-proof which appeared at CAPEX '96 was one of these three die-proofs, then this would suggest that two more die-proofs of the two-cent model (one in green and one in brown) might yet exist.

The three-cent green die-proof (as illustrated in Robson Lowe's Encyclopedia, vol. V, p. 261) may very well be (due to its lack of an XG number) a progressive die-proof, submitted to the Post Office Department on 4 December 1936, 40 and approved 11 December 1936. 41 If any die-proofs of the three-cent survived, they would have been XG-632, 41 but we know from a letter from Wood to Atwater on 22 January 1937 that only one die-proof using the XG-632 die was ever made, and this was a three-cent in red, destroyed on 27 January along with the XG-626 proofs. 42 Thus, the only remaining die-proof of the three-cent is the Robson Lowe progressive die-proof, in green. 38

Jim A. Hennok Ltd.’s December 12, 1998 unreserved public auction held an interesting selection of material for collectors’ albums. Most unusual within the sale was the variety and quantity of Canada’s 1851 12d Black Queen Victoria proofs, forgeries, and even a used original example of the stamp!

Scar die proofs of the 12d from the composite die in various conditions and colours of black (lot 501, estimate $2,000+, realized $2,645), brown (lot 502, estimate $1,500, realized $2,070), and vermillion (lot 503, estimate $750, realized $920) were sold to an appreciative clientele. Prices quoted include the 15 per cent buyer’s fee.

The interest in forgeries for Canadian and BNA material was evident in the demand for lot 511, an amazing used large-margined (and possibly unique) Sperati forgery, which was estimated at $2,500+ and reached $4,600! Lot 507 contained the original used copy (but defectively) with clear to no margins and with its pen cancel removed. It was estimated at $7,500+ and sold for $6,612.50.

The sale contained other fine Canadian material including several high values of the 1897 Diamond Jubilee issue. Lot 606 contained a nicely-centered VF-mint hinged copy of the $1 Lake value which obtained a high bid of $126.50 against a 1998 Unitrade Catalogue value of $1,000. A lightly-hinged fine-centered version of the same stamp (lot 607) reached $172.50 (Unitrade $600+). Faulty mint copies of the $3 Yellow Bistre stamp (lots 609 and 610) sold for $264.50 and $241.50 respectively (Unitrade value of $925 each).

Strong “floor” bids kept competition strong in the sale. Large collections of interesting worldwide material included several realizing over $1,000. A 19th century collection (lot 43) containing over 850 mint and used stamps from the U.S., Canada, Hawaii, and the world, was estimated at $500+ and sold for $3,450. Several treasures must have been lurking within that collection!

Substantial Commonwealth, foreign, Canadian and BNA stamps and postal history, including many lots of picture postcards, were typical offerings throughout the sale’s full-colour catalogue. For information on the firm’s upcoming sale, contact it at 185 Queen St. E., Toronto, ON M5A 1S2 or telephone (416) 363-7757 or fax (416) 365-9932.

OXFAM’s Canadian Stamp Program had its second mail bid sale on January 15, 1999. The sale’s 303 lots consisted of interesting older and modern Canadian and worldwide covers (featuring town postmarks, rates, and frankings), mint and used worldwide and Canadian stamps (singles, collections, and kiloware), and several miscellaneous items.

The OXFAM Canada Stamp Program raises approximately $15,000 per year for its overseas projects; primarily self-help initiatives in the Third World. OXFAM has introduced occasional mail bid sales to distribute some of its diverse philatelic material to collectors. Christie’s, through Spink and Sons Ltd., has introduced an innovative auction search service for its clients. “Lot Finder” assists collectors seeking that special area or country through a register of collectors’ “wants”. “Lot Finder” searches for them throughout Christie’s four salesrooms’ sale catalogues and notifies the collector.

Collectors can choose several options through a wide array of country and area codes and may be as specific or general as one wishes. When “matches” of collector and material are found, sale details and catalogue order forms are dispatched to the collector up to six weeks before the sale. Four individual countries or groups are possible per subscription and one lasts for 10 sales notifications (not on a yearly basis so very rare “wants” could last for several years).

Fees are quite reasonable and a subscription for this service (at the time of writing) costs £10 (UK), £15 (Europe), and £16 or $25 U.S. (worldwide). The British Post Office in British North America

by James E. Kraemer, FRPSC

PART I

Introduction

In 1639 the first postal system in the British Colonies in North America, now the USA, was legalized by the general court of Massachusetts. The ordinance dated November 5, 1639 reads as follows:

"It is ordered that notice be given that Richard Fairbanks, his (coffee) house in Boston is the place appointed for all letters which are brought from beyond the Seas or are to be sent thither... are to be brought unto him and he is to take care, that they be delivered, or sent according to the directions and he is allowed for every such letter 1d. and must answer all miscarriages through his own neglect in this kind."

Fairbanks was also licensed to receive letters at his house from the citizens of Boston for transmission across the Sea, "no man shall be compelled to bring his letters thither except he please. Richard Fairbanks (Fairebanke) and his brother Jonathan and wife Grace came to New England from Sowerby, Yorkshire in 1633. They built a frame house in 1636 at 511 East Street in Dedham, Massachusetts. Known as, "The Fairbanks House", it is the oldest surviving timber frame house in North America. Eight generations of the Fairbanks family lived in the house between 1637 and 1904. In 1904 the "Fairbanks Family of America", assumed responsibility for the building. It owns and operates the house as a museum. A lean-to on the northern side was added in 1670 with east and west additions added in 1790.

The Fairbanks Family of America has approximately 1,200 members. One of these was the late A. Graham Fairbanks, FRPSC and FRPSL, of Westmount, Quebec, a descendent of the Fairbanks brothers. Graham was a well known collector of BNA and authored many articles that appeared in The Canadian Philatelist and other philatelic journals.

A monthly post was established from Boston to New York in 1672. The Philadelphia post office was established in 1683. Andrew Hamilton, a Scot from Edinburgh, was appointed in 1691 by the British Crown in London, England as Deputy Postmaster General for the Colonies in America. Canada and the provinces, as we know them today, belonged to France at that time.

It may be of interest to note that another descendent of the Fairbanks brothers by Boston Senator Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana and later Vice President of the United States under Teddy Roosevelt had the honour of having the city of Fairbanks, Alaska named after him. Fairbanks was founded in 1901.

Benjamin Franklin
(August 10, 1753 – January 31, 1774)

Franklin was born in Boston, Massachusetts, on January 17, 1706. His father Josiah emigrated from Banbury, Oxfordshire, England in 1683. Twice married, Josiah had 17 children. Benjamin was the 15th child.

Benjamin Franklin, a printer, author, publisher, inventor, scientist, public servant, and diplomat was appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia in 1737. He held this position until 1753 when the British government appointed him the first of two Joint Deputy Postmasters General for the British Colonies in British North America. The other Joint Deputy Postmaster General was William Hunter. Their appointments were effective August 10, 1753. Franklin was in charge of the mails in the Northern Colonies, Hunter was responsible for the Colonies in the South. Franklin’s main base of operation for the next 16 years was London, England. In 1761, John Foxcroft succeeded William Hunter as Joint Deputy Postmaster General and served along with Benjamin Franklin until 1774.

On January 31, 1774, Franklin was dismissed from office by the British crown because of his sympathies with the cause of the rebellious American colonists as expressed in his writings and letters. He had tried to express the American viewpoint to the British but gradually realized there could be no reconciliation. Franklin was soon appointed head of the American postal system by the Continental Congress of the United States on July 26, 1775, at an annual salary of $1,000. He served until November 7, 1776, when he became a member of the President’s cabinet and one of the founding fathers of the United States of America.

Franklin who had a son William before he entered into, (in his words), “a common law marriage with Deborah Read on September 1, 1730”, when he was 24 years of age. They had a son who died at four and a daughter, Deborah died in 1774. William, who lived with his father and Deborah during his early years, became a great disappointment to his father since he took his stand with the Loyalists in the revolution. He and his father never fully reconciled.

In November 1775 American troops invaded Canada. Montreal was occupied by the Americans under General Richard Montgomery. Franklin visited Montreal and appointed George Measam, Postmaster. His tenure quickly ended when, “the American Army was obliged to retreat”, in May 1776. Franklin soon faded from public life and died in Philadelphia April 17, 1790 at 84 years of age.

Hugh Finlay
(January 31, 1774 – October 18, 1799)

In 1761 John Foxcroft replaced William Hunter as Joint Deputy Postmaster General. The Treaty of Paris in 1763 ended the Seven Years War between England and France, and it gave Canada to Britain. The Earl of Egmont had arranged for Hugh Finlay’s appointment as Postmaster of Quebec. Benjamin Franklin confirmed his appointment and made him his Deputy in Canada effective June 10, 1763.

Hugh Finlay, the third son of Robert Finlay, was born in Glasgow, Scotland in 1730. He sailed from Glasgow to settle in Quebec in early 1763 when he was 33 years old. Good family connections in Glasgow and London, fluent in French and with sufficient capital to join a wholesale partnership in Quebec made his future a success. He was assured before he left the United Kingdom that he would be the Postmaster of the Colony on his arrival. Hugh Finlay was related to William Finlay, a well-to-do, unmarried Quebec businessman and Justice of the Peace. Mary Phillips of Quebec became the wife of Hugh Finlay in 1769. They eventually had a family of 10. Mary died in 1791. Soon after his arrival in Quebec, Finlay formed a business partnership with Stephen More and acquired a number of business establishments as well as property. By the late 1760s they were deeply in debt. Meanwhile Finlay on his own invested in land.

Hugh Finlay excelled as a postal administrator. He soon built a weekly postal service between Quebec and Montreal via Trois-Rivières and a monthly post south through Skanesborough (NY), and Albany to meet the Mail Packet service between New York and Falmouth, England. He made an agreement with the Keeper’s of Road Houses to provide horses for mail couriers at half the rate charged to the public. Finlay persuaded Ferriesmen to pass couriers over their rivers without charge.

Unusually the Posts became profitable giving Finlay a good income of one-fifth of the receipts. Within a decade the system was profitable enough to support a twice weekly service on the colonies post roads plus two posts a month to New York. Hugh Finlay had been appointed Justice of the Peace in October 1764 and on September 25, 1765, he was named to the Council of Quebec.
Unofficially he assumed responsibility in Council over the Keepers of Post Houses. About 1770 he printed instructions codifying the duties of post house keepers and post riders. On January 5, 1773 Finlay was appointed “Surveyor of the Post Roads in the continent of North America”. On January 31, 1774, the day that Benjamin Franklin was dismissed from office, Hugh Finlay was appointed Joint Deputy Postmaster General and John Foxcroft was appointed the other Joint Deputy Postmaster General for the Colonies in British North America.

A formal treaty between Britain and the United States of America recognizing American independence was signed on September 3, 1783. Effective July 7, 1784, Hugh Finlay was given a commission as Deputy Postmaster General for the Province of Canada. Finlay recommended a unified authority over the over-of £1,408 by the Finlay estate. The receipt is signed by Finlay’s successor George Heriot.

George Heriot
October 18, 1799 – March, 1816
George Heriot was born in 1759 at Haddington, Scotland. He came to Canada in 1792, and settled in Quebec with the position of Clerk of Cheque Ordinance.

He was appointed to succeed Finlay as Deputy Postmaster General on the day of the latter’s dismissal October 18, 1799, but was unable to assume office until April 5, 1800. Sir William Pitt recommended Heriot for the position. Tenacity and influence won Heriot the position of Deputy Postmaster General giving him a position of prestige and power.

Late in 1801, within days of Finlay’s death, Heriot wrote to Sir Robert Shore Milnes, Lieutenant Governor of Lower Canada, asking for two posts, Superintendent of Post Houses and a seat in the Legislative Council.

He obtained neither position. Heriot was described as a self determined individual, industrious, cosmopolitan, and eminently resourceful. He excelled as a poet, an artist and a writer. In 1805 the winter mail service to Niagara was increased from one delivery per season to one delivery per month.

Heriot had an abrasive personality, lacked tact and diplomatic skills. The colonial government became antagonistic toward him. Heriot detested Sir George Prevost, (1767-1816), who had been appointed Governor of Lower Canada in 1812. Sir Gordon Drummond, (1771-1852), who became Interim Administrator when Prevost was Governor-in-Chief of the Canada’s disliked Heriot’s indifference to his position. Heriot would never listen to subordinates. Many complaints about his attitude, and mismanagement were made. Dismayed, Heriot resigned in March 1816.

It was Drummond who was largely responsible for his resignation. George Heriot, who never married, returned to England and spent most of his time creating watercolour paintings. He died in London on July 22, 1839 at 80 years of age. Today Heriot’s books, History of Canada, in 1804 and his Travels through the Country’s, 1807 are collectors items. His watercolour paintings rarely come on the market but when they do, command high prices.

Daniel Sutherland
April 5, 1816 – November 19, 1827
Daniel Sutherland, the Postmaster of Montreal since 1807, applied for the position of Deputy Postmaster General. He was successful and received his appointment on April 5, 1816. He was the first to hold this position who had previous postal experience. In 1817 there were only 13 post offices in Lower Canada and 12 in Upper Canada.

Daniel Sutherland had good connections, was known as an astute merchant, landowner and fur trader. He was born in Ayrshire, Scotland in 1756. Twenty years later in 1776 he emigrated to Canada and became active in the fur trade. On September 1, 1781 Daniel Sutherland married Margaret Robertson. Margaret was the second of three daughters of Col. Daniel Robertson, (1733-1810), the Commander of the military post at Michilimackinac on Mackinac Island. Robertson commanded the post for the period 1782 to 1787.

Concerned that the fort might have to be evacuated Col. Robertson and Major McBeath inspected the north shore of Lake Superior and suggested that a post might be located at what is now known as Thessalon, Ontario. Col. Robertson, a Scottish born army officer, a large landowner and a member of the prestigious Beaver Club in Montreal, asked General Haldimand that his son-in-law, “Daniel Sutherland, a Montreal merchant”, be engaged to manage the new post.

From 1783 to 1786, Sutherland along with James Grant, held a license for fur trading in the Temiskaming and Riviere Durnoie regions (Quebec). When the new fur trading company, The New North West Company was formed in 1798, Sutherland became a partner.

In October 1807, Sutherland succeeded Edward Edwards as Postmaster of Montreal. At the beginning of the war of 1812-1814 with the United States, he was appointed Military Postmaster. Daniel Sutherland, now the father of three children, was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of Montreal’s First Militia Battalion in 1815.

During the 11 year period that he served as Deputy Postmaster General, the number of post offices in Lower Canada (Quebec) increased from 10 to 49 and in Upper Canada from nine to 65. Plagued by ill health, Sutherland resigned on November 19, 1827, in favour of his son-in-law Thomas Allen Stayner. Ten years earlier on November 28, 1817, Sutherland had been appointed Quebec agent for the newly formed, Bank of Montreal. On August 19, 1832, at the age of 76, Daniel Sutherland died of cholera. He is buried in Quebec City.

Thomas Allen Stayner
April 4, 1828 – April 6, 1851

On December 12, 1827, Thomas Allen Stayner became Acting Deputy Postmaster General of Canada.

He succeeded his father-in-law Daniel Sutherland. Stayner became Deputy Postmaster General of Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick on April 4, 1828. Stayner’s responsibility for the post office in New Brunswick was removed effective January 6, 1829 and given to John Howe Jr. the Deputy Postmaster General of Nova Scotia.

Thomas Allen Stayner was born in Halifax, NS, on December 16, 1788. He was the son of John Stayner and Mary Allen. A descendant of a New England puritan family, Stayner joined the British Army in 1808. During the War of 1812 between Canada and the USA he was stationed in Montreal. On May 15, 1817, he married Louise, the youngest daughter of Daniel Sutherland. They were married in Champlain, NY, and eventually had a family of 16. Stayner left the army in 1823 and was appointed the Postmaster of Quebec the following year.

When he was appointed Deputy Postmaster General in 1828 there were only 80 post offices in Upper and Lower Canada. Shortly after his appointment he increased the number of post offices quite significantly and added numerous couriers. He acted without the authority of the British Postmaster General and as a result was severely criticized for “excessive expenditures”.

Stayner also incurred the wrath of the two Canadas and later the Province of Canada. This animosity lasted throughout his tenure in office. The chief reason was due to postal regulations that allowed the Deputy Postmaster General to retain the revenues derived from Canadian newspapers. As a result Stayner received almost as much recompense as the Governor General. Stayner arbitrarily increased the newspaper postal rates and was denounced for taking illicit profits. The right to retain newspaper revenues was abolished in 1844 when the post office moved its headquarters to Montreal, Quebec. At this time the Governor General assumed the right to appoint and dismiss postmasters and to fix rates of postage. This was to last until April 1851, when the Assembly of Canada acquired full power over postal services.

Despite all the criticism Stayner greatly improved postal operations. The speed of mail delivery had increased and services were extended. By 1851 there were 853 post offices in Canada. Stayner knew how to win the esteem of his British superiors but lost his popularity in Canada.

Raymond W. Ireson

Born in Lancashire, England, in 1929, Raymond and his family

74 / March - April 1999

The Canadian Philatelist / Le philatéliste canadien
(wife and three children) became Canadian citizens in 1978. After his retirement from a 42 year career with the Royal Bank of Canada, during which time he saw service in Peru, Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Cuba, Colombia, Montréal, and Coral Gables (Florida), he returned to Montréal in 1987 and resumed his former active role with the Lakeshore Stamp Club in Pointe-Claire, Québec.

He was the Exhibition Chairman of the Royal’s 1991 Annual Show, hosted by the Lakeshore Stamp Club. His collecting interests centre on the countries in which he has lived, e.g. Great Britain, Jamaica, Colombia; and thematics. His thematic exhibit, The Panama Canal Story, in various stages of development, has received the Grand Award in three Canadian national exhibitions. He has also exhibited successfully on the international scene. His first venture into philatelic writing, “The Development of Aviation and Airmail Services in Colombia”, published in The Canadian Philatelist, earned him the Geldert Medal in 1995. He is currently a regular contributor to the Society’s journal under a nom de plume.

An active member of various philatelic societies and specialty groups; he joined the RPSA in November 1977 and is currently the Society’s Chapter Liaison Officer. He is also an accredited judge at the Regional level.

John Keenlyside

John Keenlyside is a native of Vancouver, graduating from U.B.C. in economics and political science. Following a 10 year career with a national investment firm, he founded his own investment counselling business in 1973 which today serves a clientele including pension funds, charitable organizations and individual clients.

Mr. Keenlyside is active on a number of community organizations: for many years as an international advisor to the Canadian Red Cross and currently is chair of Simon Fraser University Friends of the Library. He is an active member of numerous philatelic and historical societies, is a director of The Royal Philatelic Society of Canada and an accredited national philatelic judge.

Collecting interests include 19th century Canadian postal history and colonial British Columbia books and documents.

Mr. Keenlyside frequently gives lectures and slide presentations on historical stories developed from his collections. “A Victorian Romance” involved extensive research into 19th century love letter correspondence in the Canadian Maritimes. Using a few clues on the postmarked envelopes, the story was developed to a fascinating conclusion.

Père Jean-Claude Lafleur

Jean-Claude Lafleur est né à Hull en 1937. Après ses études secondaires au Séminaire St-François et obtention d’un baccalauréat en théologie à l’Université d’Ottawa, il entreprend sa longue carrière de professeur au Séminaire St-François en 1964.

Membre de plusieurs sociétés philatéliques, il est accrédité comme juge international. Il fut commissaire et juge pour CANADA 92. Il est responsable actuel des juges à la fédération Québécoise de philatélie.

Il est l’auteur de plusieurs articles sur ce type de philatélie et donne des stages à travers la vrai thématique. Prêtre depuis 29 ans, la philatélie est pour lui presque un deuxième sacerdoce, car il y voit un chemin de fraternité, de beauté, de regard sur le monde, de partage et de don de soi à la jeunesse.

J.E. (Ted) Nixon

Ted Nixon is an active collector and exhibitor of Canadian stamps and postal history.

His current specific areas of interest are the 1870 Small Queen Issue and the World War II period. He is a member of the Philatelic Specialists Society, Postal History Society, BNAPS, CPS of GB, and Toronto Stamp Collectors Club. He is a director of the V.G. Greene Foundation.

She is an active member or officer of a number of philatelic organizations both in North America and in Great Britain, and is an accredited philatelic judge at all levels.

Her diverse collecting interests include postal histories of Wales, Great Britain, Western New York State, Newfoundland, Muscat and the Middle East; thematics of Fish and Coal; postal stationery of British Guiana; Argentinian revenues; with traditional collections of Great Britain, Canada and India.

For the last two years she has held a Director’s position on the Board of the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada and also a similar position for the American Philatelic Society. This unusual circumstance has allowed her the unique opportunity to serve both Societies as its liaison to the other. It is her wish to continue this philatelic interaction should she be successful in her bid for re-election to the RPSC Board.

The Canadian Philatelist / Le philatéliste canadien
The recent 46 cents coils have been found on three different papers. One looks like a hibright, another one is less bright and the last one closer to non-bright. What is of interest is that the wrappers for these coils match the stamps. Maybe the same paper was used for the wrappers as was for the coil stamps. Any previous wrappers on other coils appear to make use of non stamp paper.

The question of papers was discussed with a former member of the Paper Research Institute. Many of the recent Canadian stamps have been found on various papers, some that have been classified as hibright, medium bright, yellowish and other classifications. Considering the raw materials used, one must consider what contributes to these various papers and their reflection under UV. Raw materials may include fibres from plants, additives, strengtheners, dyes and other textile remnants. They may include whiteners. Therefore stamps found on hibright or even yellowish papers or any other varieties, may not necessarily represent new paper varieties at all but rather chemical changes due to the influence of the printing colour or dye used including the drying. The influence of such paper ingredients, even under a UV light may make it hard to determine the actual colour. Therefore, a little more care may have to be exercised when classifying papers of recent Canadian stamps.

Plate Layout Guides on Recent Issues

Look at the Internet and you will find announcements by the post office of new stamps that are to be issued. Manufacturing procedures are regarded by the printing companies as private and so the complete plate layout with all their various guides and marks that assist the printers are cut off prior to the release of the sheets. The Internet, however, shows some of the new stamps with all their manufacturing guides. It appears that the sheets have been scanned by the printers for release to the Internet prior to trimming them. This information is of interest to collectors helping them to better understand certain features they may find on the purchased stamp sheets. An accidental paper fold may sometimes show such features.

Lathework on the Admirals – Precancelled

The appearance of a single 10 cents bistre with lathework and precancelled by Toronto brings up the question of the rarity of these 10 cents latheworks. This precancelled stamp is the only one reported so far and other latheworks not precancelled are rare indeed. Why is this so? Both Marler and Reichel in their handbooks list the 10 cents bistre with lathework as coming from two plates. These are Plates 21 and 22. The other three plates do not have lathework. Auction catalogues and collections indicate that upper plate material from Plates 21 and 22 are not scarce and most specialized collections have copies.

The total number of 10 cents that were received by the post office is stated as 89,713,000. Although Marler displays a table that shows a total of 485,208 impressions. This he writes is far above the number received by the post office. If one deducts from this the printings that obviously belong to the 10 cents blue not the bistre, the number is still far above the 89,713,000 stamps.

It is also interesting that the list shows only Plate 21 not Plate 22 being printed. This is of course not true. What then were the quantities of the first two plates for the 10 cents bistre? The figure given by the Bank Note Co. for the Plate 21 is 40,781 impressions. Since two plates were run at the same time, not just one, this figure probably represents the impressions for Plates 21 and 22. If this is true, then a total of 16,312,400 stamps were printed from these two plates. Therefore a total of 20,390 lathework panes must have existed.

Comparing this to the rare 50 cents Plate 3 with latheworks, only about 2,357,650 stamps were printed. This means that only 5,894 impressions came from this Plate 3, or 11,788 lathework panes could have existed. This enormous difference between the 10 cents and the 50 cents possible lathework panes is interesting. It certainly does not explain why the 10 cents is so rare. Since all the reported 10 cents latheworks account for just a handful, the find of the precancelled one would maybe indicate that practically all bottom panes, LL and LR, were precancelled and only very few were not.

Lathework on precancelled stamps were usually torn off by the users and these were certainly not philately inspired. Unless some other explanation can be found, this may have to be the theory. 🦅
Some Nova Scotia Postal and Social History

Pubnico, in southwestern Nova Scotia, is the oldest region in Nova Scotia still Acadian, having been settled in 1653. Today it is composed of seven villages along both sides of Pubnico Harbour, a sea inlet seven miles long.

According to L.B. MacPherson¹ a post office called "Pubnico Head of Harbour" was opened sometime before 1850 at which date the name was changed to "Pubnico Harbour", in 1900 to "Pubnico Head" and finally in 1918 to "Pubnico" which continues to this date. However, in January 1851, a hand stamp "W.O. Pubnico N.S." was proofed in London and was in use from February 11, 1851 until July 21, 1853, when it was withdrawn and reissued March 28, 1855, and was in use until 1856. (Fig. 1)

Way offices were places where mail could be left either for the mail coach to pick up and formally placed in the ongoing mail at the next post office or could be picked up by the recipient. In Nova Scotia there were 103 way offices in 1851 and 246 in 1855² but Pubnico was the only one with an official hand stamp designating "W.O."

Figure 2 shows this mark on a letter from Pubnico to Halifax dated in M.S. 17 August 1855. It was put in the Halifax mail at Barrington on Aug. 21 as indicated by a postmark on the reverse, in red, "Barrington, N.S. AU 21 1855." There is an oval Halifax receiver mark dated AU 24 1855, and also a very faint Halifax tombstone mark. The letter is rated "3" in black M.S.

This letter to the Receiver General was written by Simon d'Entremont. He had been born in West Pubnico on 28 Nov. 1788, in a house which is still occupied by his descendants. An interesting note on this is that all the roof timbers are numbered in carved Roman numerals, indicating the roof structure was built on the ground and then reassembled on the building.

Simon was the second son of a Benoit d'Entremont and married first an Elizabeth Larkin of East Pubnico on 30 July 1810. She had a total of nine pregnancies (of which six were sons) until she died in childbirth on 16 Feb. 1830. He remarried Eliza Theriault of Meteghan (another Acadian community on the Nova Scotia south shore of the Bay of Fundy). They had a further nine children. A total of 12 out of 18 of these children survived.

In Simon's childhood there were no formal schools but before his death he could speak and read French, English, Latin and Indian (M'lk Maq).

He was a farmer and fisherman and in 1836 he was elected to the Provincial Parliament of Nova Scotia as the first French Acadian M.P.P. and in 1838 became the first French Magistrate in Nova Scotia. New M.P.P.s had to take what was known as "The Big Oath" of Allegiance to the Crown. "The Big Oath" was not only one of loyalty to the British Crown, but also to the Protestant faith which no good Catholic Acadian could swear.

This he refused to do saying in effect "that he would sooner swallow a dogfish by its tail." Soon after this the Big Oath was abolished. He remained an M.P.P. until 1840.

He also became the first French Collector of Customs in Nova Scotia. He died at the age of 98 years on 6 Sept. 1886. He was buried in the Middle East Pubnico Cemetery. In 1967 a modern grave marker was erected at his grave.

Cross Border Letters – Newfoundland to New York

In the middle of the 19th century, the only regular mail service Newfoundland had with the outside world was that provided by the Halifax-St. John’s Cunard mailboats, which operated in conjunction with the Cunard transatlantic steamers – fortnightly in summer and monthly in winter. Apart from this, communication with mainland North America was an opportunistic matter of taking advantage of any vessel about to sail in that direction.

The letter shown here is an interesting example of this. It was a business letter dated September 5, 1851. It was a short letter, which read:

“We had this pleasure on 27...via Halifax enclosing a/c Sales of Tea also Exchange for One hundred Pounds Stg. We avail ourselves of this Opportunity for Boston to forward Seconds of same no change in our Market since our last.”

As shown at lower left of the letter, the opportunity was the George Washington for Boston. This was a 1,534-ton vessel built that year for Williams & Guion, New York, who operated an emigrant line out of that port. She subsequently became part of the fleet of the Boston-Liverpool Train Line of packets in 1854. However, at the time of this letter, the George Washington may well have been on its first voyage to bring new immigrants from Great Britain to the United States.

Whatever the purpose of her voyage was, she obviously put into St. John’s for supplies, and possibly repairs, after crossing the Atlantic, and in consequence took on a U.S. Mail on departure. This was landed at Boston on September 16, where the letter was date-stamped, struck with “SHIP” and “7” to show that it was a ship letter with 7 cents postage due (2 cents ship letter fee + 5 cents inland postage to New York).

BNAPS – The Society for Canadian Philately
There have been numerous articles and letters to the editor concerning the declining interest in stamp collecting.

Various conditions have been put forward as causes of this trend. It is probable that all of these conditions are factors in the loss of interest in collecting. Some of these items are commented on below.

The number of different stamps issued

The growing number of stamps issued is rising almost exponentially. The cause of this appears to be the greed of the issuing authorities. Stamps can be a very good source of revenue. This is especially true if the people who buy the stamps can be persuaded not to use the stamps. Postage stamps are issued to show that the postage on the letter bearing the stamp is paid. If the stamp is not put on a letter, the money paid for the stamp is pure gravy to the issuer.

The authorities are not, however, exclusively to blame for this. Those who collect mint stamps are aiding and abetting the issue of more and more stamps. The problem (if you consider a large number of stamps a problem), is further aggravated by the fact that it is easy for dealers to purchase stamps in sheets. It is much easier to take a stamp from a sheet than it is to soak stamps off paper and sort and file the loose stamps.

The dealer does have the disadvantage in that he cannot add a premium to the issued value of the stamps while the post office is still selling them at face value. However, once the stamp is no longer current, a premium can be added to cover his costs. The dealer can also start selling the stamps, while they are still current, out of the country.

Ridiculous catalogue values

The values assigned to stamps in the catalogue are in many cases not realistic. It is a general principle in catalogues that MNH stamps are always worth more than used stamps. This is a point that is open to argument. The argument occurs due to the changing condition of stamp collecting caused by the increasing number of different stamps being issued.

At one time when there were fewer separate stamps issued and the individual stamps were issued in greater numbers, this was no doubt true because most of the stamps in any one issue were used on mail.

If, for example, the stamps available for a collector of a certain stamp were one mint per thousand used, the law of supply and demand would make the one mint stamp more valuable than the many used versions.

Today, many more different stamps are issued and the quantities of each issue is smaller, thus the conditions affecting the value of the stamps have changed. A greater proportion of the issue is retained by collectors and never gets used on mail. Consequently, there are fewer used stamps available for collecting. The problem is further aggravated by the change in distribution methods used by the postal authorities. Since there are a finite number of stamps that will be used each year and a set number of post offices selling stamps, when many stamps are issued it becomes impractical to send several sheets of each stamp issued to all of the post offices.

If several sheets of each stamp were sent to each office they would be inundated to the extent that they could not sell them all. If this occurred the issuing authority would have to reduce the number of issues or destroy a large number of stamps. Neither of these choices is tenable to a profit-making issuing authority so they come up with a special distribution system.

Special “Philatelic” distribution offices are established to sell these issues to collectors and dealers. This results in many issues being more available to collectors than to the general public and many of those sold by these outlets never get used on mail.

This shifts the ratio of Mint/Used stamps from the former 1:1,000+ to 1,000+:1. In this case the only sensible pricing would make hard to get used stamps more valuable than the same stamps mint!

The much higher face values of new issues

New issues have a much higher face value due to inflation. This is not a new event as inflation has been going on since money was invented.

However, there are other factors involved. At one time the post office was considered a service. It existed to tie together a country of widely separated people many of whom had emigrated from other parts of the country or from overseas. Governments that had encouraged both settling and immigration had to provide a way for these people to keep in touch with distant relatives. There was even a need, due to poor transportation systems, and lack of telephones for people in the same city to write letters to others in the same city.

With these conditions the government subsidized the post office. Now with the conditions stabilized the government takes the view “user pay” and has removed the subsidies and increased the charges to users so it can make a profit.

Shrinking usable income

This is not quite what it seems. It is not so much that usable income has shrunk, it is the cost of the hobby has increased. The cost of stamps has increased partly due to inflation, and partly due to the change to “user pay”. Another factor in the cost of the hobby is the large number of new issues that a collector requires to complete his collection. Now even a large disposable income will not keep up with the rising cost of collecting!

The shrinking number of collectors

The number of collectors is shrinking for all the above reasons: a) the number of stamps being issued at greater face value; b) the increasing difficulty to obtain good copies of used stamps of all issues; c) competing forms of collecting, after all what is the difference in collecting mint stamps than collecting any other item that is manufactured solely for collecting? In the past most collectors started collecting used stamps most of which were readily available at low or no cost. This encouraged children and those with low incomes to get into an interesting hobby.

Now it is harder to get some used stamps than to get the same stamp mint.
Collecting mint has a higher and ever rising cost and does not create the same interest in collecting something that has done its job. There is very little difference to a newcomer to the hobby between collecting a new purchased stamp and collecting any item purchased solely for the purpose of collecting. You are just collecting collectibles.

Minimum (and other) values in catalogues

The minimum value of stamps in catalogues is basically a price for a minimum purchase. It is based on the idea that for a dealer to find and get out a single stamp is more trouble than getting out all the stamps in a set. Many collectors take the values in a catalogue as a guide rather than a true value. The catalogue value is the seller’s opinion of the value of his merchandise. Another seller, who may have hundreds of copies of a certain stamp, would value the item at considerably less.

There are many considerations that must be taken when looking at value. If you look at a stamp that was valued at $1 when purchased 30 or 40 years ago, what is its value today? Many catalogues will show the stamp as still having the same value today. Yet the value of the dollar has changed considerably over this period. Some people say collecting stamps is good investment, but is it? Which is worth more: a $100 invested in stocks or in stamps for 20 years? (Editor’s Note: Many may have a different view, let’s hear it.)

Stamps from small islands or countries

The problem of small countries issuing many stamps as a money making project was an example that has been followed by many large countries including Canada and U.S.A. However, the system would not have been so successful if collectors had eagerly snapped them up. You as a collector cannot complain because suppliers are giving too much of what once was considered desirable.

The same answers can be made to similar complaints about the choice of subjects postal administrations chose to con collectors.

Gouging by unnecessary issues, long sets, inappropriate subjects

You don’t have to collect undesirable items. In fact, if you change the description of the stamp from collectible to desirable you will see how the complaints become ridiculous. All stamps issued are not desirable or collectible and a collector must make the decision as to what to collect.

To be a worldwide collector you don’t have to collect every stamp that was ever issued. If you compare our hobby with other forms of collecting you will see that other forms of collectors collect the best, not an example of everything. If you don’t like some stamps don’t collect them – you don’t have to have one of every stamp that has been issued. Not many collectors of Canada have a copy of the 12d black. If you can live without a stamp you can’t afford, you can live without a stamp you can’t stand!

At one time some philatelic organizations gave certain stamps a black blot and would not allow that stamp to be exhibited. If organizations can do this, so can individual collectors; in fact it may be better that individuals make the selection. A stamp exhibit could be titled “A collection of the better stamps of…” Remember; the collector is the final judge of what should be collected.
Who knows the needs of a collector better than a collector?

Au lendemain de la Première Guerre mondiale, les échanges entre les possessions françaises de l’Algérie et de l’Afrique occidentale française s’effectuaient par les méharis, seuls aptes à traverser l’immensité du Sahara.

Le célèbre industriel français, André Citroën, dont les industries ont été très impliquées durant la Première Guerre, décida de préparer et de réaliser une opération audacieuse pour l’époque, qui ne manquerait pas de lui assurer une publicité certaine: Relier par autochenilles Citroën, l’Algérie et le bassin du Niger, en traversant du nord au sud, le Sahara.

Malgré l’emploi de ce véhicule alors révolutionnaire qu’est l’autochenille, l’entreprise semblait un peu plus hasardeuse et faisait dire à plusieurs commentateurs de l’époque qu’elle était tout à fait utopique et presque à coup sûr, condamnée à l’échec.

L’expédition

L’expédition quittait Touggourt le 17 décembre, et atteignait Tombouctou trois semaines après, soit le 7 janvier 1923, après avoir traversé le Tidikelt et le Tenezrout. Elle fut un succès. Mais, comme si cela n’était pas assez, le chef de l’expédition, George-Marie Haarnd déci... d’arriver à Biskra [...]. Nos voitures marchaient très espacées et semblaient des points noirs dans l’immense étendue que les derniers rayons du soir teintaient par endroits de rose et de rouge...”

Le courrier de l’expédition

Du courrier fut transporté dans les deux sens par l’expédition, en autochenilles. Durant le trajet aller, la plupart du courrier régulier affranchi à 25 centimes (lettre simple) fut oblitéré d’un cachet spécial d’un diamètre de 25 mm avec légende: POSTE TRANSSAHARIENNE AUTOMOBILE. La date sur une ligne, du 17 décembre 1922 est celle du départ de l’expédition de Touggourt. Bien entendu, la plupart du courrier était de nature philatélique.

Combien de lettres ont été transportées?

Selon le procès verbal signé par le receveur des postes de Tombouctou, le 7 janvier 1923, il semble qu’un seul sac de courrier ait été transporté lors du voyage aller. On peut donc supposer que seulement quelques centaines de lettres ont ainsi été transportées, du moins dans le sens aller.

L’oblitération spéciale n’a pas été utilisée sur le courrier transporté par l’expédition lors du retour. Et il semble que très peu de courrier de nature philatélique ait été transporté. Les lettres ainsi transportées ont fait le chemin en 30 jours. L’acheminement a donc été quelque peu plus court que par le trajet régulier qui transitait alors jusqu’à la côte atlantique pour être acheminé par voie maritime jusqu’à Bordeaux ou Marseille.

Ce raid n’était que le premier d’une série. En effet, André Citroën fut aussi impliqué dans les célèbres expéditions de la Croisière Noire qui relia Colomb-Béchard (Sud-Oranais) au Tchad, et de la Croisière Jaune, de Beyrouth à Pékin à travers l'Himalaya où d’ailleurs Georges-Marie Haardt trouva la mort. Du courrier a sûrement dû être transporté lors de ces deux expéditions, mais je n’en ai jamais rencontré.

The postal authorities in London granted him an annual salary of £2,500 although his successors were to receive only £1,500. Before making major decisions Stayner usually sought the advise of others. Chief among these was James Scott Howard who was appointed postmaster of York on July 2, 1828 and had been with the post office since 1820. Another was William Machin Stairs, (1789-1865), a cousin of Stayner’s. A Halifax banker and politician, Stairs was the youngest son of Joanna Stayner and John Stairs.

Disappointed with the many complaints against the post office as well as against him personally Stayner retired on April 5, 1851. He settled in Toronto becoming a Director of the Bank of Upper Canada.

In 1860 he was appointed the bank’s vice-president. Thomas Stayner died in Toronto on June 23, 1868. (Part II of The British Post Office in British North America, will appear in the May-June issue of The Canadian Philatelist.)

PHSC

The Postal History Society of Canada was founded to promote the study of the postal history of Canada and its provinces. It publishes the quarterly PHSC Journal, whose contents range from fully-researched feature articles to items of current interest – from the pre-stamp era through postmark specialties and regional histories to modern mail mechanization.

Each year the Society holds meetings at shows across Canada. The Annual Meeting is held in the early summer, and is supplemented by Regional Meetings, usually featuring postal history seminars given by Society members. Eight different Study Groups are devoted to the detailed examination of various specialized aspects of postal history.

Membership dues are $15.00 per year, with a one-time admission fee of $1.00. For a membership application form please contact the Secretary, R. F. Narbonne, 216 Mailey Drive, Carleton Place, Ontario, K7C 3X9.

Exchanges Wanted / Demandes d’échange

Since The Royal Philatelic Society of Canada is the national society of philatelists in Canada, many requests for exchange partners are referred to us. As a service to our members, we are pleased to present these names, so that those who wish to do so can make overseas contacts. Please note that we have no way of checking the credentials of the individuals who write to us asking that their names be published; therefore, we urge that caution be taken when answering these requests.

La Société royale de philatélie du Canada ne s’occupe pas normalement des échanges entre philatelistes, mais comme elle est la société philatélique nationale du Canada, on lui transmet de nombreuses demandes de philatelistes désireux de trouver des correspondants pour échanger des timbres. Ainsi, elle décide, pour rendre service à ses membres, de publier les noms intéressés. Ainsi, ces lecteurs établiront des liens avec eux et ils pourront échanger ces timbres.

I’m writing to ask whether you have in your society someone who would be interested in exchanging Canadian stamps with Spanish stamps. I promise to send my stamps periodically.

But I would be grateful if you tell me that there is somebody interested in other kind of exchanges. I’ll try to fit. Eduardo Cimiano Prieto, Urb. Las Acacias, No. 7, 4 A, S. Martin del Pino - Peñacastillo, 39011 Santander, Cantabria, Spain.
